"The Planet rather roasted me," said the worthy president, "but in my estimation such a heated article was wholly uncalled for. Judging from the tone of the paragraph in question, it is evident that, this editor is of the opinion that, because a man is a prombitionist, he should not take a stand upon any of the other political questions of the day. I might perhaps have saved The Planet its outbreak had I explained my position at Drasden when I moved that resolution which has evidently jartied upon the Planet's sense of uniformity in matters political. I had intended to make a short speech at this convention justifying my position and showing why I, a strict prohibitionist, am found fighting in the Liberal ranks, in spite of the fact that, as the Conservatives of the fact that, as the Conservatives claim, Sir Wilfrid Laurier broke faith

"However, the time was going fast, and as there were many fine speakers present, I did not wish to prolong the meeting by any personal efforts, but in the future I shall take occasion to address myself to The Planet in such a way as to speedily convince that journal that I there is nothing strange or inconsistent in my address mysell that a way as to speedily convince that journal that there is nothing strange or inconsistent in my connection with the Reform party.

"Do you think," Mr. Parrott was asked, "that the Laurier government should have introduced a prohibitory measure, in view of the majority rolled up in favor of prohibition?"

"No, I do not!" was the answer.

"The Laurier administration did not promise that they would give the people of Canada prohibition, if there should be a majority in favor of it. In fact, it is just on that account that I find fault with the government. They made no definite promises and SOME HOT PLACES Dick Skirving Has Been in Them

Oliphants Farm, 10 miles N. E. of Pretoria They made no definite promises and gave no definite data and therefore I march to Middleburg and back I am still in the best of health.

We left Pretoria on the 16th to round up the remaining Boer army, which was supposed to be operating between us and Middleburg. Our column numbered about 15,000 all told, and we made quite a long string when marching. We met with no opposition for the first three days but on the fouth day out we saw our scouts racing back towards us, and upon coming up with them they reported the Boers approaching. We immediately threw the guns into action, but found to our disgust that instead of an army the scouts had seen, it was only a few Boers, who, upon seeing us coming, shot two of scouts and decamped.

After this false alarm we saw no more of the enemy until the 23rd. My section was for duty that day and we were detailed to form a rear guard for the convoy as the rest of the battery had moved off, when all of a sudden we heard a shell coming, and in the consider that in this respect Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in error. However, when we take into consideration the very small majority in favor of the measure I do not agree with our Tory friends when they say that the government should have been willing to out the liquor traffic. I am a strong prohibitionist, but I most sombition in which it now is, "I will just give you an instance of what I mean. We had in this county a majority of 2,000 for the Scott Act.
