Gifts for Families of Fallen Soldiers

Santa Claus had a real workshop here last week-not his headquarters to be sure, but a very important branch, This was at the Red Cross room in the Maclean Block, where for everal days the ladies of the Military chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, in the true spirit of Christmas, devoted their time and energy to preparing joyous surprises for the little orphans whose fathers have fallen for the empire.

There were baby dolls and lady dolls, and just imagine the delight when the girlies found that they could be dressed and undressed, every little garment being fitted with patent fasteners in such a way as to admit of the happiness of really mothering them. Do you remember the tragedy when you found that your dolly's clothes were sewed on, and how the bottom dropped out of your joy at the discovery that if you ripped them off they uld never be put on again? The baby dolls were dressed in little white slips with sweet wee bonnets tied with blue or pink ribbons, while the lady dolls were elegantly attired in gowns of pink and blue silk, trimmed with dainty ribbons and banks of marabou, with miniature picture hats to match. For the boys there were all kinds of mechanical toys, tinker toys, and another one which proved very popular as it was called "Killing the Kaiser's Army." Then for all, particularly for the older children, there were books galore. And of course babies were remembered with a nice woolly blanket. Four motor cars were used to deliver the presents on Saturday morning.

Hampers for Families It had been the intention of the feeling for Miss Kells in expressive vited, in seeing that their men-folk at terms, and desired, not as a club, but tend to fhis important duty. The child-ed for convenors of the committees on chapter to send a Christmas hamper to each family, but the Rotary club had already made arrangements for these, and they delivered some sixty hampers bulging with good things to the widows of the brave Calgary men who have fallen at the front.

It is a story of New York life-or one Pincus Hood, an art dealer, whose vocation is to bring to the struggling artists opportunities for recognition In this connection it brings into the limelight Christopher Mallory and several other artists who have various escapades that keeps the reader's attention from first to last.

Many interesting chapters and inci dents occur in the book to hold the readers attention and it should make popular holiday reading. The book is illustrated by F. R.

Gruger and published by George J. McLeod, Ltd., Toronto. For sale on all news stands or of the publisher at $1.40.

A GOOD CANADIAN STORY "The Girl At Big Loon Post" should prove doubly interesting to readers of the Canadian west because of the fact that the scene is laid almost at home -in the great north woods at a Hudson's Bay trading post.

Dr. George Van Schaick, an American author of well known reputation has written a story that is of absorbing interest. Centered around this Canadian outpost, it is replete with chicanery and intrique, love and devotion. The novel will particularly appeal to all those who want good reading of a light nature. Its unaffect ed sincerity add zest to the story and BIG RUSH TO SECURE to the reader's attention.

Dr. Van Schiack has written sever al other stories, notably "Sweetapple Cove," and "The Sons of the Otter," both of which were well received when Dutch ancestry.
