obtained for mechanical devices, medical or other compounds, ornamental designs, trade-marks and labels. Caveats, Assignments, Interferences, Infringements and all matters relating to Patents, promptly attended to. We make preliminary examinations and furnish opinions as to patentability, free of charge and all who are interested in new inventions and Patents are invited to send for a copy of our "Guide for Inventing Patents," which is sent free by address, and contains complete instructions how to obtain Patents, and other valuable matter. During the past five years we have obtained nearly three thousand Patents for American and Foreign inventors, and can give satisfactory references in almost every country in the Union.

Spheroidal Spectacles
AND YE GLASSES
ARE the best for the preservation of the eyes and took the medal at the Centennial Exhibition.

The lenses are made of the best material, uniform in density, and of high refractive power, their perfect polish and spheroidal shape adapt them to ease and improve the sight of the wearer. The eye being the most delicate organ, great care should be exercised in selecting spectacles; it is not enough that the glass be of the right focus, but the lenses must be perfectly centered and in many cases perfect relief is only given by having each eye fitted separately. To effect this the lenses are made interchangeable, and having an Optometer to measure the sight, a perfect fit is guaranteed.

IVANHOE.
(OF SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.)
CHAPTER IV.

The Prior Aymer had taken the opportunity afforded him, of changing his riding robe for one of yet more costly materials, over which he wore a cope curiously embroidered. Besides the massive golden signet ring, which marked his ecclesiastical dignity, his fingers, though contrary to the canon, were loaded with precious gems: his sandals were of the finest leather which was imported from Spain; his beard trimmed to as small dimensions as his order would possibly permit, and his shaven crown concealed by a scarlet cap richly embroidered.

The appearance of the Knight Templar was also changed; and, though less studiously bedecked with ornament, his dress was rich, and his appearance for more commanding, than that of his companion. He had exchanged his shirt of mail from under tunic of dark purple silk, garnished with furs, over which flowed his long robe of spotless white, in ample folds. The eight-pointed cross of his order was cut on the shoulder of his mantle in black velvet. The high cap no longer intervened between his brows, which were only shaded by short and thick-curled hair of a raven blackness, corresponding to his unusually swart complexion. Nothing could be more gracefully majestic than his step and manner, had they not been marked by a predominant air of haughtiness, hastily acquired by the exercise of unresisted authority.

These two dignified persons were followed by their respective attendants, and at a more humble distance by their guide, whose figure had nothing more remarkable than it derived from the usual weeds of a pilgrim. A cloak or mantle of course black serge, enveloped his whole body. It was in shape something like the cloak of a modern hussar, having similar flaps for covering the arms, and was called a Sclavyna, or Sclavonian. Course sandals, bound with thongs on his bare feet; a broad and shadowy hat with cockle-shells stitched on its brim, and a long staff shod with iron, to the upper end of which was attached a branch of palm, completed the pilgrim's attire. He followed modestly the last of the train which entered the hall, and observing that the table scarce afforded room sufficient for the domestics of Frederic and the residue of his guests, he withdrew to a settle placed beside and almost under one of the large chimneys, and seemed to enjoy himself in trying his garments, until the retreat of some one should make room at the board, or the hospitality of the steward should supply him with refreshments in the place he had chosen apart.

Octrice rose to receive his guests with an air dignified hospitality, and descending from the dais, or elevated part of his hall, made three steps towards them, and then awaited their approach. "Grieve," he said, "reverend Prior, that my vow binds me to advance no further upon this floor of my fathers, even to receive such guests as you, and this valiant Knight of the Holy Temple. But my steward has expounded to you the cause of my seeming discourtesy. Let me also pray, that you will excuse my speaking to you in my native language, and that you will reply in the same if your knowledge of it permits; if not, I sufficiently understand Norman to follow your meaning. "Vows," said the Abbot, "must be unloosed, worthy Franklin, or permit me rather to say, worthy Thane, though the title is antiquated. Vows are the knots which tie us to Heaven—they are the cords which bind the sacrifice to the horns of the altar, and are therefore, as I said before, to be unloosed and discharged, unless our holy Mother Church shall pronounce the contrary. And respecting language, I will willingly hold communication in that
