

A Warm and Wedding Ring

Oh, what a simple thing
To many a woman bring
The diamond of a warm
Wedding ring...

MOONDYNE!

Book Fourth.
THE CONVICT SHIP

BY JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

I.
THE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE.

"Mr. Sheridan is to go before the Committee to-day," said Lord Somers, the Colonial Secretary, as he sat writing in Mr. Wyville's study...

"What do you think of that, Mr. Sheridan?" asked Hamerton, without raising his head from the cushion.

"That it would be folly before Mr. Wyville's bill was drawn, and criticism afterward."

"What do you think of that, Mr. Sheridan?" asked Hamerton, without raising his head from the cushion.

where sat Sir Joshua Hobb at a table, turning over a pile of documents, and beside him, pen in hand, Mr. Haggart, who took in a reef of lip as Sir Joshua and Sheridan entered.

Since Haggart's return from Australia, three years before, he had adopted a peculiar manner toward Mr. Wyville.

The committee consisted of five members. Mr. P., three country gentlemen, who had not the remotest knowledge of penal systems...

"What do you think of that, Mr. Sheridan?" asked Hamerton, without raising his head from the cushion.

the man he had captured, and released die of thirst on the plains—die because upon him by accident—he died before my eyes, alone—and he was not murdered.

Mr. Wyville had been to the prison, and had turned sharply on his chair, with an insolent stare.

"Where does your property lie?" he asked.

"What do you think of that, Mr. Sheridan?" asked Hamerton, without raising his head from the cushion.

"That it would be folly before Mr. Wyville's bill was drawn, and criticism afterward."

"What do you think of that, Mr. Sheridan?" asked Hamerton, without raising his head from the cushion.

Unexpected words; and the look that passed between the two men as they clasped hands was of brief but beautiful intensity.

"What do you think of that, Mr. Sheridan?" asked Hamerton, without raising his head from the cushion.

"That it would be folly before Mr. Wyville's bill was drawn, and criticism afterward."
