Smallpox on Newfoundland

The Health Officer, Dr. Brehm, had a wire this forenoon from Magistrate Lilly saying that the Newfoundland had several cases of small pox on board and the belief is that eight or ten of the crew are stricken with it. At 1 p.m. to-day the Telegram interviewed Mr. Harvey and he stated that he had heard the report but had no official confirmation of it from Capt. Kean. Neither did he know if the ship had left Trinity and he wired for all particulars. From Dr. Brehm we learn that the disease is of the usual mild type prevailing in this country for months past, and when the Health Officer received the news from the Magistrate he was not at all surprised but had been anticipating such an outbreak on the ship owing to the following circumstances. He is fully aware that the disease was brought on board the vessel by two men, residents of Seal Cove, who went out in the Newfoundland. The Newfoundland sailed with the other ships from Wesleyville on March 13th, and three days later, on the morning of the 16th, the man Morgan of Seal Cove was found to be suffering from the disease on one of the railway cars as he came cityward, and was sent to Hospital. It has been learned since that several others at Seal Cove had been afflicted with the malady and had recovered. Two men from the infected houses went on the ship, and it is believed it was they who either developed it on the ship or infected the men on board now ill of it. After the Morgan case was discovered it was said that these men were vaccinated and therefore the hope was entertained that the men would not develop the distemper. They either did so or infected the others. The Health Department, of course, had no control over the matter of the outbreak on the Newfoundland as the two men had gone to the sealfishery in the ship while at Trinity. The vessel is held under strict quarantine and while here she will be placed on the quarantine ground and Dr. Brehm will board her on arrival and examine and vaccinate the crew, while those ill will be sent to Hospital.

Personal Notes.

W. B. Nicholson, who is going to Newfoundland to act as Canada's commercial agent in that colony, was in the city yesterday, and left this morning for Louisburg, to take the Gloucester for Port aux Basques. Mr. Nicholson goes to Newfoundland with the idea that the tariff wall between Canada and that island can be broken down. He says that he considers reciprocity between Newfoundland and Canada as much more of a live issue than that of reciprocity between Canada and the United States. Mr. Nicholson comes from Woodstock, N.B. He succeeds J. E. Ray, who left Newfoundland on March 12th to become Canadian commercial agent at Havana, Cuba, in succession to Dr. Kirkpatrick, another Woodstock man.—Sydney Record.

S. MILLEY

A Fierce Blizzard.

About 1 a.m. yesterday a storm began, the like of which has not been experienced at such a late season for several years past. It blew a gale from the N. E. and this continued until an early hour this morning, the wind often attaining hurricane force blowing from the N. E. Thick snow accompanied the gale and early yesterday the streets were blocked with snow, the country roads were piled high with drifts and all traffic was suspended. The street cars were held up the tracks being covered with more than two feet of snow, and all places of amusements, clubs and halls were deserted, few caring to leave their homes last night and brave the elements. Those who had to go countrywards suffered terribly, and several country people remained in the city last night sooner than face the roads. Along the railway line it was also very stormy, and at sea it must have been a terrible day and night. Several vessels now due must have received a drubbing.

Hot Beds Damaged.

At Quid Vidi and neighbourhood last night the storm was severely felt. The wind blew with the force of a hurricane and houses rocked in the blast. At Pleasantville about 40 panes of glass were broken in Mr. J. M. Dooley's hot beds, and the snow getting in killed a lot of fine plants owned by him.

DIPHTHERIA.—There are 39 sufferers from diphtheria in the Hospital at present.
