"Peace, Peace, Peace"

The so-called Central Powers are, in fact, but a single Power. Serbia is at its mercy should its hand be put for a moment freed; Bulgaria consented to its will! Roumania is overrun by the Turkish armies, which the Germans trained into serving Germany, and the guns of the German warships lying in the harbor at Constantinople remind the Turkish statesmen every day that they have no choice but to take their orders from Berlin. From Hamburg to the Persian Gulf, the net is spread. Is it not easy to understand the eagerness for peace which has been manifested by Berlin? Ever since the snare was set and sprung, "Peace, peace, peace," has been the talk of her Foreign Office for a year or more; not peace upon her own initiative, but upon the initiative of the nations over which she now deems herself to hold the advantage. A little of the talk has been public, but most of it has been private, through all sorts of channels. It has come to me in all sorts of disguises, but never with the terms disclosed which the German Government would be willing to accept.—President Wilson.

Encourage the Settler.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I saw by statistics in the Evening Star of the 13th inst. that, according to figures issued at Immigration Hall, Winnipeg, a total of 15,445 immigrants had been brought into Canada, including settlers and farm-labourers, bringing with them $2,344,489 (two million three hundred and forty-four thousand four hundred and eighty-nine dollars) in cash during the first four months of this year. For the same period 2,126 (two thousand and hundred and twenty-six) homestead entries have been made by immigrants. Why don't our Government invite our American and Canadian cousins to settle on our West Coast where there are millions of acres of the most fertile land, in the Codroy Valley, on the banks of the Humber, at St. George's, Stephenville and Grand Lake, where the land is most fertile and where fruit grows in abundance and the climate general and inviting?

Thanking you for space, I remain,
Yours respectfully,
GEORGE KEOUGH, O.S.

Aged Miner Injured

AT BELL ISLAND.

A miner named Penny, of Salmon Cove, C.B., met with a serious accident at Bell Island, on Thursday afternoon while working in one of the slopes. Penny, with a number of workmen, was filling cars when a lump of ore fell from overhead and badly crushed one of his legs. He was picked up in an unconscious condition by his fellow-workmen who immediately got in touch with the Company's doctor, who had the sufferer removed to the hospital. Doctors Lynch and Giovannetti examined the man's injuries and were obliged to amputate the limb. The patient, who is 60 years of age, is doing as well as can be expected. When he regains sufficient strength to stand the journey to St. John's he will be brought over to the General Hospital.

WEEK END

During one of our holiday rambles this season we happened to drop along at an old-time homestead in one of the many hamlets which dot the seaboard of Avalon; and while there we learned a pathetic story which for devotion and constancy would do credit to the memory of the immortal Evangeline herself.

The homestead in question is one of the few now left of that quaint style of architecture which our forefathers brought with them from the Old Country two centuries ago. To look at it without, or to have seen it within, was to be transported to the days of Baltimore or to the times of Guy. Within its shelter had been born the family of the young Irish couple who in their native county of Cork had plighted their troth and then left to seek their fortune in the New World; and who also made it a choice to come out to Newfoundland as the most likely place to find it. Evidently they did not find any very great material wealth, but they no doubt found that which wealth cannot purchase and which money cannot control, they found the priceless treasure of mutual love, and exercised the higher gift of simple faith. This they transmitted to their children, and in turn it has come down to the present generation, who, though poor in this world's goods, are rich in the faith of their fathers. Of the last generation only one son was left to perpetuate the family name. This son was of stalwart physique, and, like his neighbours, he gained his living from the sea. At summer time he fished from the harbour, and nightly returned to the quiet of his little one-storied cottage and to the embrace of his little flock. At winter time he usually took a foreign voyage and thereby added to the comfort of his home. And so it went on, until some two years ago, when the voyage which proved the last one was taken.

Like many other ships that one in which our hero sailed became long overdue, and when patience became exhausted the inevitable had to be accepted and the mother and her six little children had to realize the stern fact that never again would their bread-winner provide for them, nor would his footsteps be heard as of yore upon the garden walk. The ship had gone down and six homes had been plunged in sorrow, but the last to give up hope was the heroine of whom we write. She knew that at best she was "hoping against hope," and that never again would the familiar voice of her husband greet her; but amid it all she still cherished a faint expectation that there might be some hope of his return. With this faint longing the lonely mother and the wondering children kept their spirits up, and for the long period of six months they put a light in the window of the little cottage, saying to themselves that if father comes to-night he will see the light and he will know that we have expected him.

And so it was that night after night, and week after week, and month after month, the humble wife trimmed her little lamp and set it in the window which faced the road and left it as a beacon of hope to greet his approach. But the absent one came not, no familiar footstep was heard, no hand raised the latch—there was no return. The sea had gained its prey and the last inheritor of the old-time
