Catching Fish

With Birds.

JAPANESE USE CORMORANTS.
KIO, April 10, (Associated Press).—On a moonless night, illuminated by blazing torches, Edward, Prince of Wales, will be taken for a ride along the River Niagara to witness the strange cormorant fishing industry while on his visit to Japan as guest of the Imperial Government. A curious method of catching fish with birds instead of hook and line is practiced in Japan from time immemorial. Twenty-eight men, four boats and 64 cormorants constitute a working unit of the picturesque fishing fleet to be seen in many sections of Japan but particularly along the Niagara river. The cormorants are trained from quite early and will continue work for 15 or 20 years. When well trained and properly handled, the fish will average about 150 lbs. a year. The master fisherman, distinguished by a particular hat, stands in the bow of the boat, which is pulled by a crew of no fewer than 12 birds with remarkable skill. Another fisherman, a fourth member of the crew is stationed between the two, armed with a pole of bamboo, which he strikes to the birds at their work, at the same time encouraging them by shouts and cries.

ORNITHOLOGICAL TRAP.

Each cormorant has a ring of metal or bone around the base of its neck, permitting it to swallow the small fish as food but effectively stopping those of marketable size from passing through. Round the body of the bird is a cord to which is attached in the middle of the back a short strap of stiff whalebone, with which to lower the bird into the water or lift it out again and a thin rein of spruce three, twelve feet long. The master lowers his 12 birds into the stream and holds the reins in his left hand, manipulating them with his right as occasion requires. The second fisherman does the same with his four birds while the third man begins his volleys of noise. The birds start diving and ducking with wonderful swiftness and the fish come swimming towards the blazing light. The master has a buoy time handling his 12 strings to prevent them tangling while the birds are dashing hither and thither.

THE DOZEN OF THE FLOCK.

When one of the birds becomes engorged, it swims about in a foolish, helpless way, with its head and swollen neck erect and the master hauls it in. He forces its bill open with his left hand, still holding the other lines, and squeezes out the fish with his right, after which he returns the bird to its work. This is all done with remarkable dexterity and quickness that the other birds have not had time to become entangled and immediately the whole team is again perfectly in hand. Each bird has its own number and knows it. No. 1 or "Ich" is the doyen of the corps, the senior in years as well as rank and his companions according to their age come after him in numerical order. Ich is the last to put into the water and the first to take out the first to be fed and the last to enter the baskets when the work is over. Ich has the post of honor in the eyes of the boat. He is a solemn, grizzled old fellow, with a pompous air. The others are placed alternately on either side of the gunwale according to their rank, and should the law of order of precedence at any time be violated, a terrific rumpus occurs among them. After the fishing is over each cormorant is taken out of the water, the master can tell by its weight whether it has had enough to eat during the hunt, and if not, the bird is fed with the inferior fish that have been caught.

Prominent Man Sent to Prison

LONDON, April 9.—(Canadian Press Cable).—After several weeks of trial, the well-known financier, Ernest Terah Hooley, was sentenced in the Central Criminal Court on Saturday to three years' penal servitude for conspiracy to defraud persons who were induced to buy shares in the Jubilee Cotton Mills.

Of five other defendants, two included Fletcher, ex-Mayor of Derby, were acquitted. Land agent Demery and Solicitor Wallis were sentenced to twelve and ten months respectively in the second division. The judges took under consideration the suggestion that Wallis was struck off the rolls. Ex-Mayor MacDonald, of Inglestone, who was recommended for mercy, collapsed in the dock. He was bound

THE CADDIE.

It was a little caddy boy who said to me in shame: "I've beaten many a man at golf, and never won a game." "You've beaten many a man," said I, "and yet you say to me 'You've never won a single game.' That surely cannot be."

"I beat my man to-day," said he. "At least he swore I did." He dubbed three shots on Number Seven, and said: "Confound you, kid!" I wish you wouldn't stand so near when I am set to play. I've told you now a dozen times to keep out of my way."

"Three years I've caddied at the club and twice a week or more I've had to tote the losers' bags, and always they were sore. And always they have made it plain upon the eighteenth tee. That they'd have won the game hands down if it hadn't been for me."

"It seems I always beat the man who plays a rotten game. And every time he dubs the shot I have to take the blame; But when that fellow wins a match, he's proud as he can be. And takes the credit all himself and never mentions me."

If you plan to have a room freshly papered, be sure to tack a piece of the new paper at one end of the attic. If you should ever find it necessary to patch the paper, you will have a piece that is toned down to match that already on the wall.

Household Notes.

When baked tomatoes, apples, stuffed peppers, etc., use muffin tins. They will keep their shape better than when baked in the usual way. If the edges of a grass rug have become ragged, use wide-shirt bolting to bind them. Wash the bolting first, so that it might be sewed on more easily. To insure winter clothing from being molested by moths, clean, brush and immediately roll tightly with naphthalene in several thicknesses of unbroken paper. After placing the ham in the frying pan, sprinkle over it a little powdered cloves. This does not give much of the flavor of the cloves, but improves the flavor of the ham itself. Cut from pasteboard a shape which will just fit the mouth of your food chopper, and use when grinding dry
