His Repentance.

"For Caroline's sake," he entreated. "If this mistake becomes known in all its unhappy details, my professional doom is sealed. Never again, as long as I live, as you and I are together, will I attempt to act on my opinion in opposition to yours. Be merciful to me, Dr. Davenal! For her and my sake conceal it from the world."

And Dr. Davenal yielded. Ever merciful, ever striving to act in accordance with the great precepts of love and mercy, he yielded to the prayer of the unhappy and agitated man before him. His own partner, Caroline's husband, no, he could not, would not, bring upon him the obloquy of the world. "I will keep the secret," Mark Cray. Be easy. You have my promise."

The unhappy tidings were made known to the household—that their mistress could not be aroused from the effect of chloroform which had been administered with a view of saving her pain; and they came flocking in. She was not dead but she was lying still and motionless; and the means of recalling life were lost. Mark Cray continued his efforts when all hope was gone, trying every means, probable and improbable, in his madness. Had a battery been at hand he would have employed galvanism.

As if they might as well have sought to arouse a stone statue. Never more would there be any arousing for poor Lady Oswald in this world. Death was claiming her, uncomplaining death. "I will keep the secret," Mark Cray. Be easy. You have my promise."

Parkins, considerably recovered from her own attack, but in a shaky and fearful state, had come into the room with the rest. Parkins seemed inclined to rebel at the state of things; to question everybody, to cast blame somewhere. "Why should chloroform have been given to her?" she asked of Mr. Cray.

"It was given with a view to deaden the pain," Mr. Samuel T. Casey, Belleville, writes: "In the spring of 1884 I began to be troubled with dyspepsia, which gradually became more and more distressing. I used various domestic remedies and applied to my family physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with little hope of relief; and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. Although now 79 years of age I can enjoy my meals as well as ever, and my general health is good. I am well-known in this section of Canada, having lived here 57 years; and you have liberty to use my name in recommendation of your VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which has done such wonders in my case."

CHAPTER XIV.
NEAL'S DREAM.
Dr. Davenal and Mr. Cray went forth to the hall. Outside the hall door stood Julius Wild. It now wanted twenty minutes to 7. The infirmity pupil had arrived a quarter of an hour before, and had waited patiently ever since to be let in. He had rung the bell in vain. In the confusion and distress of the house, it had perhaps not been heard, certainly had not been attended to. His rings had been but gentle ones; Julius Wild knew better than to make a noise at a house where illness was inside it; and he waited quietly enough, wondering whether the servants were asleep, whether Lady Oswald was worse, and believing the doctors had not yet arrived.

When they came forth he was excessively surprised, marveling greatly at his non-admittance. "I have been ringing this quarter of an hour," he said by way of explanation and apology. "I can't think what the servants have been about."

"What have you been about?" thundered Mark Cray, giving way to anger, although he had come straight from the presence of the dead.

Mr. Wild was astonished. "I say, sir, I have been waiting here. I have been here this quarter of an hour, and could not get let in."

"And pray, what kept you? Why were you not here to begin with?"

"It was here to time, sir," was the deprecating answer, and the young man marvelled much what had put out his good-tempered medical man. "You told me to be here a little before 6:30, sir, and I got here five minutes before it."

Then began that dispute which was never satisfactorily settled, each to this day, believing himself to be in the right. Mr. Cray held to it that he told him 5:30; Julius Wild earnestly protested he said 6:30. The wrangling continued for some minutes, or rather the difference of opinion, for of course the pupil did not presume to wrangle with his superior. A few sharp words from Mark, preemptory ordering him to hold his tongue, concluded it.

The young man walked close by the two doctors, just behind them; for they had been walking down from Lady Oswald's all along—had not stayed on minutes at the door. He had wondered at first if the operation had taken place, and why they should leave the house just about the time fixed for it—now that he had heard of the misapprehension with regard to the hour, he supposed it was over, and that Mr. Cray's vexation arose from the fact of his not having arrived for it. But he was a young man of curiosity, fond of sociability in a general way, and of asking questions, so he thought he would ask one now, and make sure.

"Is the operation over, sir?"

"Yes," curtly answered Mark.

"Was it successful?"

"When did you ever know Dr. Davenal unsuccessful?" retorted Mark. "That was successful enough."

It never occurred to Julius Wild that the stress upon the word "that" implied, or could imply, that, though the operation had been successful, something else was not. Perhaps it was half a subterfuge in Mark Cray to have said it. The young man asked no more questions. Finding himself so snubbed, he desisted, and walked behind in silence. Neither of them told the unhappy truth to him, Dr. Davenal may have been too pained, too shocked to speak; and Mark Cray's conscience too suggestive. Nay, Dr. Davenal may not have seen his way clear to speak at all. If he was to conceal the culpability of Mark Cray, the less he opened his mouth about it the better.

Suddenly Mark turned around. "You are not wanted, Mr. Wild. There's nothing more to-night."

The young man took the hint at once, wished them good-evening, and walked off to the infirmary, there to leave certain articles that he had been carrying. He observed that Dr. Davenal usually so courteous, never answered him, never gave him the good-evening in reply to his.

The two surgeons walked on in silence. The streets were nearly deserted, and the sound of praise and prayer came upon their ears from the lighted places of worship as they passed them. The evening was a warm one, and the doors of the churches and chapels stood open. They never spoke a word one to the other. Mark Cray felt as he had probably never felt in his life—ashamed, repentant, grieved, humble. He was guilty of the blood of a fellow-creature. He called it a "mistake." A mistake in one sense it undoubtedly was, but a wicked and wilful one. Dr. Davenal felt it to be both; felt that the giving of the chloroform stealthily, in direct opposition to his expressed opinion, deserved a worse name; and, though he had promised not to betray Mark, he could not but subdue his own feelings, and speak to him in friendly tones.

In silence they reached the doctor's gate.

"Good-night," said he, turning in at it. "Good-night," replied Mark, continuing his way. But—and he felt it—there had been no invitation to him to enter, no pleasant look, no shake of the hand.

Neal was at the door, sitting himself and watching the passers-by in the dusky street. The Sunday arrangements were good at Dr. Davenal's, each servant being expected to attend public worship twice in a general way. Neal's times were morning and evening, and Dr. Davenal inquired why he was not at church.

"It was Jessy's evening at home, sir, but she had word sent her that her father was taken very ill; so I offered to stay in for her while she went to see him."

Of course there was no objection to be made to that; Neal had done right. Dr. Davenal went into his study, and lifted his hat from his brow as if a heavy weight were there. He had no light except what came in from the street lamp.

He leaned against the window in thought. Two hours before, Lady Oswald had been, so to say, as full of life as he was, and now—dead. Killed. There was no minding the matter to himself; she had been killed. Killed by Mark Cray!

Egbert—Where are you working now? Cholly—Gwent heavens! I'm not working; I'm employed in my father's bank. Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than salutary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, earache, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

In Christians, with its 160,000 inhabitants there are only 27 places where liquor is retained.

Fraud.
Beware of peddlers or others who are going around soliciting orders for Pure Gold Baking Powder in bulk, and delivering instead a trashy alum powder worth only about one-quarter of the price. Pure Gold is sold only in small packages or cans, bearing the well known lithographed label used by the company. A liberal reward will be paid by the Pure Gold Company to anyone giving such information as will lead to punishment of fraud of this kind.

There is no good reason why blind asylum attendants shouldn't consider themselves entitled to rank among our leading citizens.

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confounded with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills as they are extremely mild and in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority.

"My dear fellow I am awfully glad to see you! I hope you are in a position to lend me that $10 you owe me."

A man's wife should always be the same nervous and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they will make her feel like a different person, at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too.

The reason a person sees stars when he is struck in the head must be because it makes him sore aloft.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted to the above ailment, but also to the other disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are especially subject.

ESSEX.

Clerk Lusted, of Windsor, has tried to find the bylaw authorizing the city to collect $70 from each liquor license and in regard to which Inspector Pacaud wrote the council. The search so far has been unsuccessful, and he thinks perhaps that when it was passed the original was sent to the license commissioners and it has been lost. Unless it is found those who have taken out liquor license in that city will have the $70 refunded.

PERTH.

The Presbytery of Stratford met in Knox Church, Stratford, on the 9th inst. Rev. A. Stewart, moderator. The session records of Knox Church, Stratford and North Nissouri were presented for examination. A request from the congregation of Knox Hill that the church there shall be known as Boyd's Church, in memory of their late pastor, was granted. Mr. P. Scott asked and obtained leave of absence for six months that he may recruit his health. Messrs. Leitch and Drummond resigned their commissions to assembly, and Messrs. Hamilton and Panton were appointed in their stead. A paper on "The propriety of ordaining at time of licensure" was read by Mr. Hamilton, and the Presbytery without committing itself in any way tendered its thanks to Mr. Hamilton. The clerk was instructed to forward a Presbyterial certificate to Rev. S. C. Craik. References were made to the removal by death of Mr. Thos. Freeborn, of Welleles, and Mr. Wm. Dunn, of Knox Church, Stratford, and Mr. Wm. Davidson, of Carleton Place, of whom had served many years in the eldership. Communication from the Presbyteries of Calgary, Brandon, Kingston and Halifax, showing that application would be made to assembly for leave to receive Revs. A. Robinson, R. Galloway, F. W. Florence, A. King, and F. Davey, as ministers of that church was read. The Presbytery then adjourned to meet again in Knox Church, Stratford, on July 11 next, at 10:30 a.m.

Post Veritas Editor.
A tall, lank young man came into a New York editor's sanctum, and handing him a poem several feet long to read, said in a condescending sort of way:
"You can publish this poem for $10?"
"All right. Just hand over the $10. This is below our usual rates, but times are hard."

"You misunderstood me. I mean you can have the poem by paying $10."

"Can't take it. It's too cheap. It would be robbing you, for I know where you can get more than $10 for it."

"Take it to a justice of the peace and read it to him, and you will get $20 and 30 days in the county jail if you don't pay the fine."

He looked sadly at the editor, shook his head and waited himself out of the door.
