WERE'S A THRILLER OF HORSE WORLD

Railwayman Tells a Good Story of Kicking Steps Off on the Fly.

A horse that tried to get gay with Grand Trunk express No. 23 yesterday morning, when it was on its way to Detroit had a narrow escape from being killed, and its owner is probably wondering today what is wrong with it. According to the train crew the animal was standing by the side of the track a couple of miles west of Hyde Park, when No. 23, drawn by the engine "Longboat," came tearing by at about 55 miles an hour. The horse braced itself, and lashed out with its hind feet at the train.

The feet took effect on one of the steps and broke it off, but the speed of the train sent the horse over on its a tendency to greatly increase the size head, and it turned about half a dozen somersaults before it could stop. The incident was most amusing to those who witnessed it. Airships had better give this horse

MR. KING ELECTED HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Struck by a Buffer Beam of a Locomotive and Was Hurled Several Feet.

William Clark, Grand Trunk crossing watchman at Talbot street, had a close call from being very seriously injured last night, when he was struck by the buffer beam of mogul engine 635 and hurled to one side of the tracks. Clark was crossing from the north track to the south tracks, and apparently did not know that the beam extended as far as it did. The train was going out at a lively clip, and the beam struck him a heavy blow in the side and hurled him several feet. Clark was able to gather himself up, after some minutes, and made his way to Dr. Drake's office. He was later removed to the hospital. It is not thought that his injuries will result seriously, although he is bady shaken

For two or three weeks farmers have noticed large strange tracks in the soft earth in the swamp and neighboring fields, unlike anything seen around there before. The tracks are as large as the footprints of a child 7 or 8 years, according to perfectly reliable authorities, and one farmer who saw the animal described it as a large beast, greyish-brown in

The footprints show the impression of long, sharp claws. The skeletons and remains of scores of groundhogs have been found in the vicinity, and the remains of one young cow were also found, the animal having fallen a vic-tim to the hunger of the stranger in the swamp. Today a large posse of men and dogs is being formed, and this afternoon a determined effort will be made to exterminate the beast, be it a bear, lion, or whiffenspook.

Life at the Court House Is One Peaceful Dream These Days.

The summer languor has cast its spell over the court house and jail. Every-where is peace and quiet, and a half somnolent feeling seems to pervade the atmosphere. The summer months are months of dearth in court house circles. Everyone is too busy keeping cool to go to law. Soon, too, the long holidays be-gin, when the offices will only be open from 10 a.m. till 1 p.m., and even then t will be somewhat difficult to put in the time as briskly as usual. The county is still overcome with its rather unusual burst of virtue, and it is only very occasionally that anyone slips from the narrow path, sufficiently, at least, to land them in charge of the magistrates. Even the police court seems to be failing the jail P. C. HARRY GREEN authorities as a source of supply. Today police court seems to be failing the jail there were only two persons who sought the shades of Castle Carter.

So life is very quiet, and there is noth ing to disturb the even tenor of the way of those who tread the devious paths of justice around the county buildings.
