The Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Dewdney, by whom the bazaar was formally opened, carried away with them a nice collection of flowers and baskets full of the other pretty things which went to make up the bazaar. Miss Macdonald has charge of the "yellow booth," every article in which was of some shade of this modest color. The collection was endless in variety—cushions, screens tea-cosies, fans, covers, draperies, packets all were to be found artistically worked in silks and woolens of every tint; but the predominating yellow was the background in every instance
