How J. Pierpont Morgan "Held Up" The Meat Trust For $10,000,000

"Unless I am given the underwriting f the bonds to complete the consolida-on of the packing houses, I will ruin your dressed beef and provision trade in Europe by raising steamship and railroad rates 10 cents a hundred and lowering the rates on live stock 10 cents a hundred. I made this statecents a hundred. I made this statement to you, gentlemen, the day I returned from Europe several weeks ago, and I repeat it. It is my ultimatum." This statement, practically in these words, made by J. Pierpont Morgan to representatives of the Chicago packing houses, forced an agreement between the "financial king" and the heads of the mightiest industry in the West. The underwriting of the bonds was turned over to J. P. Morgan & Co. The packing house consolidation therefore, is now a fact. Morgan's fee is $10,000,000.

feet the new corporation which will control the meat business of the world. The greater part of the money will be used by the new corporation to purchase the various plants not already bought, and the balance will be employed as working capital.

So far reaching is the packing industry, and so great its influence upon the traffic and trade of the country, that Morgan felt he must be in a position to stand over the corporation as a czar in its inception, and in order to carry out his designs, he dared threaten to ruin one of the greatest branches of the industry, its foreign trade.

The conference at which the packers accepted the ultimatum delivered by Morgan was held in the offices of Morgan & Co., in Wall street. The men prsent were J. P. Morgan, George W. Perkins, Morgan's confidential man; J. Ogden Armour, P. A. Valentine and Arthur Meeker, representing Armour & Co.; E. F. Swift, of Chicago, and E. C. Swift, of Boston, representing Swift & Co., and Edward Morris representing Nelson, Morris & Co. The story back of Morgan's ultimatum gives a splendid example of the dictator's methods. By threatening to wreck the foreign beef business of the Chicago packers he succeeded in wrenching from Khun, Loeb & Co., a $5,000,000-commission to underwrite the $100,000,000 of bonds. Moreover, he not only appropriated to himself this lucrative commission, but forced from the packers a fee twice as large as that asked.

commission, but forced from the packers a fee twice as large as that asked by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Nearly two months ago Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were retained by the packers to underwrite the $100,000,000 of bonds necessary to perfect the consolidation. The commission was given to this banking house because of its friendly relations with one of the three big packers. The fee asked and granted was $5,000,000 in the bonds of the new corporation, which amount was to be paid out of the total issue.

OWO in the bonds of the new corporation, which amount was to be paid out of the total issue.

This understanding between Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was reached before Morgan's return from Europe. Upon his arrival in America he heard of the proposed transaction and immediately decided that he wanted J. P. Morgan & Co. to finance the deal.

Morgan has so grown into the habit of financing the big corporations of the packing house deal, with its lucrative retainer, to be missed by him. He would not permit the organization of an industry second only to the billion-dollar steel trust in the volume of its business, to be effected without his consent and his direction.
