bring it to completion. We notice by the English papers that Hon. Mr. Howe, a few days before he left England, addressed a large public meeting at Bristol in relation to the proposed line. Mr. Howe's speech, which is given in this Morning's Chronicle, is very forcible and able. He entered into a general description of the provinces of British North America, and showed the great advantages they offered to intending emigrants. His remarks on Nova Scotia were very full and other resources, which are so unbounded .-He alluded particularly to the gold discoveries, saying: Gold can be found all along the frontiers, and a poor man without machinery, by his unassisted labors, with his own pickaxe and fingers, could pick up half an ounce of gold a day. He referred to the loyalty of the people of the Provinces, and then went at length into the subject of the Intercolonial Railway, dwelling on its necessity in a very explicit manner .-He concluded by saying that, if those who were interested in humane establishments and relief of the poor were to form themselves into an association for planting in the North American colonies that portion of their surplus labour that was burthersome, the Governments

We shall not be pharisaical, how ever, if we claim for Canada the consolation the enjoyment of a higher political morality than obtains in the great state of New York. The legislative and political morality of the province is not perfect, certainly. There has been knavery amongst us, and corruption, and underhand, indetensible dealing for the accomplishment of objects in parliament and out of it. For aught we know to the contrary, bribes may have n paid to facilitate the passage of measures involving private interests. Our lawgivers may not be all purists. Some of our members might suffer in a comparison with Aristides, And it might be possible to discover in these latitudes he microscopic beginnings of the lobby influence which has attained colossal proportions over the border. But we are nevertheless better than our neighbors, as the extraordinary revelations at Albany abundantly prove. "Virtue being comparative, then, and, like truth, semetimes not easily defined, we have but to scan the barefaced scoundrelism which goes unpunished at Albany to find causes for exulting over the absence of anything resembling it in this portion of the British empire. "The time has been, indeed, when the experiences of the British parliament exceeded in iniquity those now told to us from Albany. The fitty, hundred, five hundred, and five thousar dollar cheques which found their way by no means mysteriously into the hats and pockets of members and agents of the capital of the Empire State were trumpery trifles, not worthy of being mentioned in the same breadth with the donations which flowed from the public treasury Even before the expressions of thanks which the Third, when Lord North was prime minister, and members were bought and sold publicly in the parliamentary market. Such a comparison would bring to light simply the difference between respectable corruption, being princely, and paltry rascality, being trivial. Even upon this head something might be said. To receive duct and excellent bearing of your men, were to us so many expressions of thanks and examples to sell oneself genteely and for a devoutly loyal purpose. But to hand a thousand dellars to a sergeant-at-arms that he may buy the votes of a shoul of members by treating them to cigars and liquor, and to drop a cheque for $250 into the greasy hat of a reporter that he may shut his eyes and not see, is to descend to the lowest depths of legislative infamy. In the one case the wrong was decently done; in the other, the public nos trils are outraged by transactions in every way worthy of the Five Points."

Sin,-We are glad to see the columns of your valuable and widely circulated paper arrayed against the Freeman in a matter of which it is either ignorant itself, or which it wishes to impose upon the ignorance of others. The infa-moes and abominable traffic carried on by the man Corrigan at Carleton is no new thing, as we understand, and a case has occurred where even the guard on duty has been enticed away. You rightly and justly exhonerate the Colonel Find and will only afford France a moral supin the action he took in the case.
