A pair of gold-rimmed overglasses swung from a gold chain and a big diamond sparkled in his searf. Mr. Wiman amplified his talk by the use of a great big map of the Dominion of Canada. With a school teachers' Prointer' ha carried his audience from Maine to California and from Hudson Bay to the Gulf much more rapidly than you could travel on any of his railroads. There was not a big array of deft newspaper reporters in front of Mr. Wiman. The Mail and Globe had been furnished with a copy of the speech in the afternoon, but Mr. Wiman said a good many things, as he generally does, that are not in his "prepared" speeches. For instance he said the sole plank of the Liberal pistform was Commercial Union.

Mr. McPherson occupied the chair and atroduced Mr. Wiman. He said that their organization believed that Free Trade as a theory was unimpeanable. It was their belief that the prosperity of a country depended on the greatest freedom of trade, together with the most efficient and economical government. They believed in Free Trade with the United States and wished to get enlightened on the subject. They desired to get the opinion of representative men living in the United States on the question and had asked Mr. Erastus Wiman to favor them. He was glad to see so many ladies present.

Taffying the Town and Bisself.

Mr. Wiman commenced in the rounded phrases to talk of himself and Toronto, He appeared for the first time in his life before an andience in his native city, and in all his life.

appeared for the first time in his life before an audience in his native city, and in all his life—a life of joy, sorrow, defects, success, riumphs—this was the moment of his norement pride. It seemed natural that the distance in the course the question have about to discuss. [Applause,] The newsboy, they knew, thought he owner the town. His energy, quickness, check and his indomitable perseverance best fitted hin for success in after life, and if he ever though the owner date town he had not yet parted with the proprietorship. [Laughter.] This was a great city—a city of great churches, educational frastitutions and of marvelous charitable organisations. Toronto was a city of tride, having a lurking consciouses that her prosperity depended on heraelf rather than the country round about her. There were those who predicted a time when Toronto would not be so prosperous. He caure here to propound a policy which would lead up the farmer, the miner, the innuberman, and everyone contributing to the industrial wealth of the country about Toronto would be sure.

He then related for a moment in a far away ecutatic admiration of his Great Idea, saying: "The question of closer relations is so commirbensive, so alluring, so grand in itseff cits that it is exceedingly attractive." "Say!" remarked a voice from the gallery.

E. Cauld Be Doine Without a Political Change was necessary to secure this advantage. Commercial Union did not tend towards and commercial Union would effect and said no political change was necessary to secure this advantage.
