A Chat in the Kitchen.

If you wish your white clothes to look clear and pure, always have ready a kettle of boiling water and scald them thoroughly before putting them in the hot rinsing-water.

Soapy water is allowed to dry into them. Scalding removes the scum. Prints should be washed out a piece at a time in warm water, rinsed and hung up to dry immediately.

But very few colors will bear soaking in hot soapsuds. If you want your flannels to fall, wash them in hot water, rub well upon a board, using plenty of soap, and rinse in cold water. This rule never fails.

To keep linens from rusting, rub it over with melted lard. Fine that never be washed in hot soapsuds; they will wear much better if wiped over occasionally with an oil rag.

All the trouble caused by greasy dishwater can be prevented by cleaning the dishes in cold water, and then rubbing with Indian meal. Use enough to absorb the fat. Kettles cleaned in this way do not rust. The meal makes a good feed for poultry.

Much time and labor can be saved by having things where you know exactly where they are. In order to do this you must have a place for everything, and insist upon everything being kept in its place.

Make some small shelves, or cornices, and tack to the kitchen wall in some place where they will be handy. In one of these put a few knitting needles to be used in handing down, and a tin of needles in another.
