One of the greatest questions now before the people of Cantions now before the people of Can-ada is how to conserve their forests. Mr. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Commission of Natural Resources, speaking before the Empire Club on the 20th inst., said: 'At the end of twenty years the United States would have no timber for sale in the ordinview be maintained under a treaty?

"Nor does it appear to me to be necessary that we should worry ourselves much over reciprocity in manufactures. The secretary of the Manufacturers' Association said that only three per cent. of the imports of the United States from Canada consisted of manufactured goods. If the Americans want more of the excellent products of our factories let them reduce their tariff, and I have

"But suppose the markets of the United States were thrown open to us, would that not greatly enhance our prosperity? The United States lie along our border for 4,000 miles, with a population of ninety millions. If you have anything to sell, there is an unlimited market for us—why not let us enjoy it? This is a fascinating picture, but there is another side to it. The boundary is just as long for the Americans as for the Canadians, and a reciprocity treaty that opened one side of the line would also open the other. While our seven millions were getting into the American mar-kets with our merchanlise the American treather than reican ninety millions were getting into Canada, and the home market, always the best, where not glutted with goods, would be rendered practically valueless. The fruit-grower would find American fruit in the market before him, and everywhere so abundant that his trade world be so abundant that his trade would be ruined. The flour merchant, the seed merchant, the dealer in provisions, such as bacon, butter and cheese, would be similarly situated, and any occasional sale that he could make in the United States would be poor compensation for the lesses incurred ount of the surfeit of the home market by American goods. "But in a still larger sense Canadians would stand to lose from the opening of the American markets, and that is very clearly put by Senator Beveridge in a speech recently delivered on reciprocity. He says: There must be reciprocity with Can-Our tariff with the rest of the world does not apply to our northern neighbor. anxious to change. Senator Beveridge says: 'The American tariff has driven American manufacturers across the Canadian border, built vast plants with American capital on Canadian soil, and so on. Well, suppose it has, and we are told that American capital to the extent of $225,000,000 has been invested in Canada is that a condition that we should seek to change! If the Americans change it of their own motion we cannot help it, but surely we should not encourage negotiations which would prevent the investment of capital from any quarter in Can-ada. If there is anything we need it is capital for our industries and farms and mines and factories. But notice another observation of the distinguished Senator. He says: 'That capital should be kept at home to employ American workmen to supply Canadian demand.' Well, let me tell Senator Perceides the American to Senator Perceides the American Senator Perceides the March 1988 (1998) and 1998 (Senator Beveridge that some time ago we allowed American workmen to supply Canadian demand, but if he ever hopes that this will happen again, then I very much mistake the Canadian sentiment of to-day. Even that is too much, but to increase it as Senator Beveridge proposes would be treason to Canadian industries, the very thought of which makes one shrink from the con-

The Washington Treaty contained several obligations. One was the free admission of fish into the United States. Interpreted, it still meant free fish, Interpreted, it still meent free fish, but not the packages in which they were put up. The Washington treaty allowed the use of certain American canals in exchange for the free use of Canadian canals. Interpreted it meant that the vessels or barges could pass only if they were unloaded when they entered American when they entered American terri-tory. Under a reciprocity treat the two countries will no doubt undertake certain obligations which, pos-sibly, when they come to be interpreted may not mean what either party understood them to mean. But the obligation will continue during the kife of the treaty, to the annoyance of one or both parties.
