

- With substantial trade in nuclear technology for peaceful purposes (from reactors to uranium), Canada was the first country possessing nuclear technology to renounce the production of nuclear weapons. Canada fully supports the indefinite extension of the NPT, and is working actively to reach that goal.
- Canada welcomes recent accessions to the treaty - namely Algeria, Argentina and Ukraine - and urges all remaining countries to add their names to the growing list of member states.