

The following table shows the results of the election of 1800. The candidates were Thomas Jefferson and John Adams. Jefferson won the election by a narrow margin.

Candidate	Electoral College	Popular Vote
Thomas Jefferson	73	69,000
John Adams	65	68,000

The election of 1800 was a significant event in American history. It marked the first time that the power of the federal government was transferred peacefully from one administration to another.

Jefferson's victory was a triumph for the Democratic-Republican Party. It signaled a shift in the political direction of the United States.

The election of 1800 was also a test of the new Constitution. It demonstrated that the system of electing the President through the Electoral College was workable.

The election of 1800 was a landmark event in the history of the United States. It established the precedent of peaceful transitions of power.

The election of 1800 was a turning point in American history. It marked the beginning of a new era of democratic governance.

The election of 1800 was a significant event in the history of the United States. It demonstrated the strength of the new government.