

Notable Scottish Trials—continued.

THE TRIAL OF MADELEINE SMITH. Edited by A. DUNCAN SMITH, F.S.A.(Scot.), Advocate. Dedicated to Lord Young. Fully illustrated. Demy 8vo, 400 pp. Price 5s. 1905.

"As a record of one of the most remarkable criminal trials of modern times, the book will be found of supreme interest."—The Scotsman.

"The publishers are to be congratulated on their selection of Mr. Duncan Smith as the editor of the present number. He brings to his task a delightful freshness, and unfolds the romantic tale in a truly romantic manner. . . . It is only when we come to the appendices that the real importance of Mr. Smith's report is apparent. Those show an amount of research unequalled in any report of the trial yet issued. . . . It is not too much to say that, if the succeeding volumes maintain the high standard of work which marks the present number, the series should have a ready and abundant market."—Glasgow Herald.

THE TRIAL OF THE CITY OF GLASGOW BANK DIRECTORS. Edited by WILLIAM WALLACE, Advocate, Sheriff-Substitute, Oban. Fully illustrated from contemporary photographs. Demy 8vo, 500 pp. Price 5s. 1905.

"The evidence on both sides is given verbatim, and the entire work of editing has been exceedingly well done by Mr. William Wallace. There are some excellent portraits."—Glasgow Citizen.

"Mr. Wallace, the editor, has discharged his duty admirably, and his skilful guidance is exceedingly helpful and valuable. The introductory chapter is a singularly lucid and effective piece of writing."—Aberdeen Daily Journal.

THE TRIAL OF DR. PRITCHARD. Edited by WILLIAM ROUGHHEAD, W.S., Edinburgh. Dedicated to the late Sheriff Brand, Ayr. Fully illustrated. Demy 8vo, 346 pp. Price 5s. 1906.

"The narrative is most interesting, and one which lawyers and laymen alike will read with fixed attention."—Law Times.

"Mr. Roughhead's highly interesting book."—Lancet.

"One of the most absorbing of a remarkable series."—Glasgow Herald.
