TO ERECT A MEMORIAL TO THE HEROIC WOLFE
Laudable Object of F. G. Wade, K. C., Who Has Interested Torontonians in the Proposal.

The Empire Club luncheon to-day will be addressed by F. G. Wade, K. C., of Vancouver, who has been spending several days in the city organizing a campaign towards establishing a fund for the erection of a suitable memorial to Canada's national hero, General James Wolfe, on the site of Wolfe's grave in the Church of St. Alfege, Greenwich, England. He has formed a committee of prominent Torontonians, which so far consists of Sir Edmund Walker, Col. Geo. T. Denison, R. L. Wilkie, R. L. Patterson, and Noel Williams. General Wade will probably also join, and others will be added as it becomes necessary.

During the past year, Mr. Wade has had large subscription promised for the purpose. In Vancouver $121 was raised, including $50 from Lord Northcliffe. The Winnipeg Canadian Club voted $500 out of the club fund, and Lord Strathcona has agreed to donate at least $500.

General Wolfe is buried in the crypt of St. Alfege's Church, and formerly in 1856 Frederick Pountney, a church warden, erected a memorial window, showing a list of all the general's victories, culminating in that at Quebec. On July 24, 1908, the Quebec Tercentenary was celebrated in the church, Archbishop Sweetman of Toronto being present; and on Nov. 20, 1909, a memorial tablet was unveiled by General Sir George White, which was donated by private subscription among the officers of Wolfe's old regiment, the Loyal North Lancashire.

In 1903 Mr. Wade discovered Wolfe's grave, which was practically unknown to Canadians, quite by accident while traveling in that part of England, and it struck him forcibly that, inasmuch as Wolfe was the man who had actually made Canada possible, we as Canadians ought to erect some monument to mark our appreciation of his great victory. Mr. Wade's idea is a column surmounted by a statue, to be placed in the church. He estimates at four or five thousand pounds, but he considers that it is more a matter of organization than anything, and that there will be no difficulty in obtaining the fund, owing to the strong national sentiment.

Mr. Wade was editor of "Variety" in 1879, on the staff of The Globe in 1880, editor of The Manitoba Free Press in 1881. He was crown prosecutor for the York district from 1887 to 1901, and acted as counsel in the Alaska boundary case in 1906.

SCAFFOLDING WAS WEAK G.O.P. KEEPS ONLY SLIM MAJORITY IN THE SENATE
Evidence Given at Inquest Into Weston's Triple Tragedy—Workmen Had Complained of Danger.

Reminiscences on the part of the foreman, himself a victim, seems, according to evidence given last night, to have been the cause of the accident in the stand-pipe at Weston Thursday last when James D. McVey, the foreman; Robert McGregor and Louis Smith, a Macedonian, were killed. The inquest was opened by Coroner Charlton, and will be resumed Friday night. J. B. Fay, who was working on the pipe, and Thomas W. Self, builder, gave the most enlightening evidence. Fay swore that the men who were working on the pipe had complained to McVey about the unsafe condition of the scaffolding. Fay himself had pointed out flaws in the piece of timber which broke, precipitating the three men a distance of 30 feet to death, but McVey had paid no attention to it.

"I can't understand a foreman not changing the plank when the men complained. If I would not have used that particular piece of timber," he said.

The enquiry was conducted in the town hall, which was packed. There were about eight more witnesses to be heard.

The piece of timber which broke was a ledger, or plank attached to the centre upright pole and nailed to the body of the pipe. The men were working on the pipe, and the scaffolding, under the direction of the foreman, McVey, who did not tell each man specifically what to do. The tier which gave away was built by Robert Russell, who was later made foreman, had fixed when it was nearly all done.

"Who put up this particular ledger?" asked Mr. Monahan.

"Mr. McVey,"

"Who nailed it?"

"Mr. McVey."

"Was there any complaint about the piece of timber that broke?" asked the crown.

"Yes, I complained about it to McVey. I saw a flaw in it which, in my estimation, weakened it. I refused to put it up, so McVey put it up himself. He said it was strong enough to hold a horse. I pointed out the defect, but he did not examine it. The men also complained that the ledgers were not long enough. They did not reach to the side of the tank. When the ledgers touch the tank they jam and keep the scaffold firm. When it does not fit, it has play and is liable to loosen the scaffold."

When the Fall Came.
The accident occurred when he was on the outside ladder, fixing a plank. "It seemed to me as though a plank was sliding down the inside of the tank. I thought a plank had fallen. Then I heard a body would run down below. Russell shouted for me to come down, saying, 'It is all up.' I climbed to the top and looked over. Instead of three men, three men in sight, there were none."

"Was everything done that is usually done?" was asked.

"No, we did not have the lower platforms. There were no knee braces. From the sides of the planks to the uprights, the scaffold was built of hemlock. Pine is preferred. The piece that broke had an open grain."

Frederick Watson, a laborer, is the engineer on the job, running the engine. Fry had been complaining about the scaffold for quite a time, he said.

Wood Was Weak.
Thomas W. Self, 73 Howard-street, contractor and builder, examined the scaffold after the accident.

"I would think the scaffold a rough job," he said. "The accident might not have occurred had they not used such a cross-grained piece of wood. The city by-law compels us to have flooring underneath to catch men in case of a fall. I would have had brackets from the end of the ledger to the upright."

G. Frederick Price, 22 Vermont-avenue, assistant city architect, explained that a strengthening cleat should have been put under the ledger and nailed to the upright.

But that found the plank was good for a load of 300 pounds. There is practically no by-law concerning scaffolding in Toronto.

"It must simply be strong enough," he said.

Robert Russell, 127 Spadina-avenue, who had been made foreman when McVey was killed, also gave evidence. John Meldrum, who about the injuries sustained by the Macedonian. One side of his head had been smashed in.

Simmons' Statement.
NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Henry L. Simmons, the defeated Republican candidate for governor, said to-day: "I believe that the election is a mere incident in the fight for progress, which will go on until its ends are attained. The leadership of the Republican party is in the hands of progressives, and we do not propose to be discouraged by any temporary setback. There is so much to be done to make the American political life clean and efficient, and so many patriotic and patriotic men, that I have no fear of the permanence of any reaction."

This From "A Friend."
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 9.—The Gazette-Times, staunch Republican, says editorially of the result in New York State:

"There is but one interpretation of the result of yesterday's election in New York. It is a smashing protest against the dominance of Theodore Roosevelt. A sufficient number of Republicans in the Empire State have wavered of his self-constituted leadership to turn the governorship over to a Democrat rather than acquiesce in those new policies of his that threatened to overthrow the established institutions and to introduce dangerous innovations in law and government. Col. Roosevelt's performance since his return from abroad has not been such as to commend him to conservative and sober-minded Republicans. He has not conducted himself as a retired president of the United States should. There has been neither dignity nor decency in his department. It had been better for his fame, better for the Republic, better for the country as a whole, if instead of his new nationalism, he had preached a new conservatism. No man, and least of all one who has been so signally honored as he, is justified in employing his wide personal popularity in such reckless exploitation of untold and doubtful theories of revolutionary reform as he has indulged in the past three months."

"Of course it would be unfair to charge up to Col. Roosevelt all that happened of Republican ill-fortune yesterday in various parts of the country, but he unquestionably must be held to answer for the deplorable revolt in New York. In a general way also he

FIRST PROHIBITION MAYOR OF LONDON
Inducted into Office at the Guildhall—Asquith Reticent as to Results of Veto Conference.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Sir Vesey Strong, London's first prohibition lord mayor, was inducted into office to-day.

The civic pageant included a novel feature. The procession, from the Guild Hall through the streets of the city to the law courts, where the oath was administered, and thence back to the Mansion House, was devoted to the representation of four scenes from Shakespeare, connected with important incidents in the history of the City of London.

Premier Asquith delivered the principal speech at the lord mayor's banquet in the Guild Hall this evening, but the expectation that he would enlighten the public on the progress of the veto conference was not realized. Mr. Asquith made only a passing reference to the conference proceedings, which have been the subject of much speculation, owing to the fact that the results arrived at must be disclosed to parliament, which will reassemble on Nov. 15.

Altho the conference probably will hold one more meeting, there is hardly the faintest hope of a successful result. It is believed that the only matter remaining to be discussed is the form in which the failure of the negotiations shall be announced.

After assuring the gathering that the government will use every force necessary to put down such lawlessness as is prevailing in Wales, the premier spoke briefly of foreign relations.

It might seem utopian, he said, but he hoped that, under the growing pressure of public opinion, political feeling would become such as to put an end to the competition of armaments.

PRaise for the Queen's OWN.
LONDON, Nov. 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the Mansion House banquet, Sir J. French, after a rousing defence speech, against recent criticism by Col. Gudge, during which he had relied on would confidently and gladly rely on themselves, referred to a more "pleasant and congenial topic," namely, how much the army appreciated the presence of the Queen's Own Rifles at manoeuvres. He was only echoing the heartfelt wish of every soldier in the Empire, the earnest hope that the interchanges of troops might become frequent.

Regarding his visit of inspection to Canada, French said he expressed how highly he estimated the splendid energy and high imperial spirit apparent everywhere in the Canadian forces.
