Mr. Powell contended that the course adopted by Mr. Borden to get the evidence should be followed. Then Mr. Russell moved, and it was carried, that all witnesses be excluded from the committee room. Mr. Holmes, M.P., also left the room, as he had been named as a witness James McManus on the Stand. Then the examination of James McManu was proceeded with. He lived at Colborn and was a scrutineer for Mr. McLean a the election at poll 4, Donald Cummings booth. Mr. Edward Shaw was the othe scrutineer. Mr. Holmes' scrutineers wer James Chisholm and John Lawson. A man from town took Mr. Chisholm's place; hiname was McEvers. After 10 o'clock Chisholm went away. A man named Dancy took McEvers' place about dinner time Dancy was not sworn in. Witness objected to Dancy' presence when counting time came. Mr. Holmes was then represented by the poll clerk, the deputy returning officer, Lawson, Dancy and Chisholm. The deputy returning officer said Dancy would stay in, saying he had his papers.

Never Produced Papers.

Weitness demanded the papers, but he never produced them. Dancy took no part, but did some talk, and sat up with the other scrutineers. The deputy returning officer put the counterfolis from the ballots in the right hand pocket of his coat, with one exception. Witness did not watch very carefully; they were neighbors and he trusted him. He asked the deputy returning officer why he did this, and he said it made no difference.

Dancy was a lawyer and a Reform stumper, McEvers was a kind of a lawyer. A paper produced looked like a ballot, only it was dirty and torn. The deputy returning officer gave no reason for allowing Dancy to stay. Dancy and McEvers were not sworn. He did not know that Mr. Holmes' scrutineers were sworn at all.

In cross-examination by Dr. Russell, witness said he kept the taily. There were 98 votes altogether. The ballots were all right, and the papers made up. The only thing he saw wrong was Cummings putting the counterfolis in his pocket. In answer to Mr. Bell, witness said Cummings put the counterfolis in his pocket before he put the ballot in the box. He could not say whether he took anything out of his pocket.

Mr. McInerney asked witness how many they had in their book marked for Mc-Lean.

Sir Louis Davies objected. They could put the book in. Mr. Fortin said that it was outside the subject of inquiry. Marking the Ballot.

Mr. Bennett pointed out that the bailot was so initialled that in order to see the initials the deputy returning officer must see how the ballot was marked.
