MR. HAZEN'S WEAKNESS

Premier Hazen does not rise to the occasion when golden opportunity presents itself. He has a fine opportunity to advance the interests of the city of St. John by taking up seriously the question of the harbor bridge, but he declines to do so, and the Standard weakly attempts to apologize for him. An attempt is made to impeach the good faith of Hon. Dr. Pugsley in this matter, and in this the Globe joyously joins the Standard; but the citizens are not deceived. The bridge is a necessity. Dr. Pugsley has taken the cooperation of Mr. Hazen. As in the case of the St. John Valley Railway, Mr. Hazen temporizes and makes excuse. Were he a man strong in initiative and bold in execution, as becomes the leader of a party or a government, he would not have lost popularity to the extent to which it has been lost, since he became premier. The Standard looks back to the provincial elections, but conveniently ignores the lesson of the by-elections. The Conservative party, however, does not forget the fact, and is growing more and more active under a leader who does not lead. The Conservative situation in this province, in regard to leadership, is much like that in the federal arena.

THE WATERWAYS

President Taft is an earnest advocate of the development of waterways in the United States and at the meeting of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in Washington yesterday roused the delegates to great enthusiasm by his address. Some policy, he said, must be adopted, with reference to "the development of those instrumentalities which nature has furnished for the transportation of goods and for the controlling of railroad rates." The development of waterways in Canada has made great progress, and has been of enormous benefit to the country. Hon. Dr. Pugsley, in a number of public addresses in different parts of Canada during the past year laid great emphasis upon the need of further development along this line. He sees that this work should be carried on without a break, in order that as the country fills up the people may be able to avail themselves of cheap transportation privileges. Along with the creation of inland lines of water transportation he stands also for the development of terminal facilities at the ocean ports, to handle the traffic originating along those inland lines, both water and rail. Mayor Stephens recently pointed out to the Canadian Club how much the United States had lost by neglecting the commensurate development of ocean ports, when they were building railways and developing inland traffic, and urged that no mistake be made in Canada. Fortunately the government of the day stands behind the minister of public works in his efforts to give the people the greatest possible advantage to be derived from waterways development, and Canada, though with a similar population, will be better off in that respect than its neighbor.

PROTECT HONEST DEALERS

The movement begun by the Moral and Social Reform Council, to secure an official inspection of all liquors sold, should be vigorously supported by all influential organizations. An inspector goes into a dairy and takes samples of milk for inspection, and there is a law against the adulteration of food. It is common knowledge that much of the frenzy of drinkiness is due to the quality of the liquor consumed, and that much liquor sold in St. John is not pure. Liquor bearing false labels is sold. A man who a few years ago was employed in a wholesale liquor house in this city, and who was an expert in such matters, told the Times that given certain chemicals he could produce gin, brandy, whisky and other drinks, having a passable flavor but very far from being of a quality that should be sold. He was an advocate of the license system, and of liquor inspection. If the inspector had authority here, as he has in Ontario, to go into a saloon and take away samples of liquor for analysis, there would not be so much fraudulent liquor sold in this city. There is more profit in this kind of liquor, and there are dealers who care more for profit than for the health of their patrons. Every honest dealer should heartily support the action of the Moral and Social Reform Council, and doubtless support from that source is expected. Honest dealers should be protected.

CANADIAN CLUBS

The Canadian Club of Montreal has departed somewhat from the principle which has generally been adopted by these clubs throughout Canada. It has not been the custom to adopt resolutions on any of the subjects discussed. There have been one or two exceptions, and the Montreal club furnishes another. It listened one day this week to an address by Judge Choquet on the immediate necessity for reform in the treatment of young offenders in Montreal, which the judge declared had the effect of manufacturing criminals rather than reforming them. At the conclusion of his speech Rev. Dr. Synnolds moved the resolution, "That the Canadian Club of Montreal, in the opinion of this club the provincial legislature should at the next session enact a law creating juvenile courts in this province, particularly in the city of Montreal, along the lines of the law to that effect passed by the federal government."

It may be remarked that if a Canadian Club decided to become something more than a social and educational factor it could not make a better beginning as a dynamic force than at the point where citizens are made or marred. The question is one of the first importance. It is doubtful, however, if the policy is a wise one for Canadian Clubs. The trouble is not where to begin, in the matter of resolutions, but where they might end. Once the policy was adopted it would be very difficult to avoid controversial matters, and the success of Canadian Clubs is due to the fact that setting aside political and religious differences they bring men together in a social way to hear large questions discussed by able men, without of necessity accepting or rejecting all the views expressed. The effect is good socially, and the intellectual horizon is also broadened. High ideals of citizenship are held up before the members. All this is very valuable, and the very freedom of the atmosphere at club luncheons has been one great cause of their remarkable success throughout Canada.

To illustrate what might happen if the rule were altered we may take the case of the St. John club. There are many local questions of interest and importance, from another point of view, and another moving a resolution. While the members might listen with interest and perhaps with benefit to the orator, they would be practically certain to balk at the resolution. Thus far the St. John Canadian Club has studiously avoided discussions, and the result has been excellent. It has had able speakers, whose addresses have done much to enlighten the members, and the utmost social harmony has prevailed.

THE UNITED STATES TARIFF

The Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce states that one of the topics exciting most attention among members of congress is the tariff. He does not anticipate, however, that there will be much legislation in this matter at this session. In the meantime President Taft has given assurance that there will be no tariff war if it can be avoided. We quote from the Journal:

"The session is opening with a strong demand for continued legislation on tariff from members of both branches of congress and from the country as a whole. Three lines of work are being called for—The revision of certain unsatisfactory schedules such as woollens and cottons, the establishment of a tariff commission, and the postponement of the time at which the rates of the maximum tariff will take effect. The demand for changes in the woolen schedule has been largely stimulated by the admission of President Taft that he does not think that schedule is satisfactory and that the only factor that prevented a revision of it was the political strength of the woolen men in congress. But it should be distinctly and definitely understood that there is no prospect whatever of any general tariff legislation at this session of congress for the reason that the leaders have made their bargains as to the tariff on the basis of the present act and its continuance for a reasonable length of time. To renew the struggle at least session is no part of their plans and when they are asked whether such a renewal is possible even as to a single schedule they receive the proposition with open ridicule. Even the reform leaders in congress, some of whom have now been here for a few days, do not pretend that there is any opening for a renewal of the discussion at this session with the hope of getting legislation, although they profess an intention of working as hard as they can for action."

FORMALLY DEMAND ZELAYA'S RESIGNATION

London, Dec. 9.—The United States government has demanded formally the resignation of President Zelaya of Nicaragua according to a cablegram from Nicaragua received by a business house here today. The message adds that this information was communicated by Zelaya himself who said that his resignation from the presidency would take effect probably at the end of December.

THE WINDOW WISHERS

(Detroit Free Press.)
I think that now's about the time, with Christmas drawing near, to make a plea for all the tots who get but little cheer.

The little window wishers, who from now till Christmas give Will gauds and toys and things and stately things.

That Santa Claus, so good and kind, Will surely, somehow, chance to find Their little stockings hung with care And fill them, while they slumber there.

And they will wander pale and cold, and wonder why they will pause, And tell their little wants unto some imitation Santa Claus.

Who'll take their names and write them down, and send them on content and glad, Believing Santa Claus will come to every orphan girl and lad; That Christmas morn, beside their beds, They'll find their dolls and grubs and sleds; For poor tots have a faith as great As children born to better fate.

The little window wishers, it's for them I will soon be after moving, Who miss, perhaps, a mother's love, or lack a father's knee; Who face the bitterness of life through no fault of their own, Who dream and hope for all the joys that other tots have known;

It's such a little thing to do, I'm sure it must appeal to you; Seek out some window wisher here, Some little heart that you can cheer.

Hunt up some little boy or girl whom Santa may perchance forget, Some little one who is too young to know the truth of Christmas yet; Preserve that simple, trusting faith, the sweetest memory of youth, And save that child the broken heart that comes with knowledge of the truth, Make some poor little one your care, Who may awake to grim despair, Some little stocking laid, because It may be missed by Santa Claus.

HOW HE KNEW.
In an assault and battery case tried in a Cleveland court the prosecuting witness testified at length that the defendant had knocked him senseless and had then kicked him for several minutes.

"If this man's attack rendered you unconscious," demanded the magistrate, "how is it that you know he kicked you when you were down?"

The question seemed to floor the witness. He was lost in reflection for some moments, then, brightening, he replied: "I know it, your honor, because that's what I would have done to him if I'd got him down."—Circle Magazine.
