CARLETON MAN FOUND DROWNED

William Joyce's Body Lay in Slip This Morning LIVED ON SCHOONER

Was in Town the Day Before and is Thought to Have Fallen Overboard in Trying to Get on Old Vessel at Night—Son in Chain Gang

William Joyce, aged about fifty-five was found dead on the mud in Dunn's slip, West End, at low tide this morning, and it is believed that he fell over the wharf some time last night, and met death by drowning. The body was found between the wharf and the schooner Reporter, by Daniel Dowd, who reported the matter. The man and his son, Richard Joyce and Daniel Dowd, an elderly man, made their home on the schooner which is an inn.

To a Times-Star reporter this morning Dowd said that he and the Joyces had made the cabin of the schooner their home for some time. Early yesterday morning, when they were "coming ashore," he said that Joyce told him then that he was going to central police station to pay the fine of his son who had been arrested for drunkenness.

Later, about 11 o'clock, he again saw Joyce in Hogan's bar in Water street. At that time Joyce took some drink but went out almost immediately, and he supposed that he was on the way to the central police station. Dowd said that he must have been asleep when the unfortunate man came down the wharf, as he heard no noise. When coming from the schooner to the wharf about 6 o'clock this morning Joyce lay face up on the mud.

"I think perhaps he made a mistake, and did not go to the jail, but was drinking," said Dowd. The latter said there never was any trouble among the three, and the best of feeling prevailed.

As the vessel's moorings allow of her swinging off sometimes from the wharf, it is thought that Joyce had a little trouble getting aboard and fell overboard. It was said this morning that when he came over to Carleton last night, he showed signs of drinking.

He is survived only by his son and both were employed as city laborers. Coroner F. L. Kenney, after viewing the body, gave permission for its removal to Beattie's undertaking room. He is making further inquiries and had not decided this morning whether or not to hold an inquest.

There is a notice on the man's forehead, but it is thought that he received this in his fall from the wharf. Dr. Kenney expressed the view that the man had come to his death by drowning.

Richard Joyce was arrested on Friday night last for drunkenness on Sheffield street. He was sentenced to a term in a jail and went out this morning to work in the brick gut. The man's word was sent from Carleton that his father had been drowned but he could not be reached as he was out with the other prisoners.

THIRD LAD IN DALTON ROBBERY

An Intimation in Police Court Proceedings—Quinlan and Dalton Remanded After Evidence is Completed

In police circles there is in mind a third lad besides Patrick L. Quinlan and Thos. Gallagher, who are charged with the theft of $7 from Wm. J. Dalton's store in Main street.

In the police court this morning mention of another was made and the name of Hamilton was used, but it was said Hamilton was not the right name. Inquiries are to be made.

Quinlan and Gallagher were further remanded in the police court today. The evidence was finished and the lads would have been sent up for trial at the circuit court which opens today. Edmund S. Ritchie, who appears for Quinlan, said, however, that if sent up, he would likely choose speedy trial for Quinlan. Meanwhile there was a doubt if bail were taken, whether or not Judge Forbes would try the case under the Speedy Trials Act. Alfred Kierstead and Quinlan's father were in court to give bail for Quinlan, and Gallagher's mother was instructed as to getting bail for her son. Meanwhile the youths were further remanded.

Miss Beattie Irvine said she was going into Mr. Dalton's store about 11 p.m. Some one ran past her. There was a little boy in the store and he told her a man had robbed the store and ran out. She could not identify Quinlan, as the one who ran by her.

Miss Zita McDonald, who was with the last witness told the same story adding that she called to Mr. Dalton, who was in the rear store and had to call three times before she made herself heard. She could not recognize the one who rushed by her. Policeman Hamm, recalled, said that Gallagher told him he met Quinlan in Sheriff street, and Quinlan said he knew where they could make a haul. They talked of a scheme to send a boy in for potatoes. Gallagher said he gave the boy a few cents to get potatoes and the boy went to Dalton's while Quinlan followed. When he came out, he ran across Main street and down Harrison street and Gallagher ran with him into an alley way, and went through to Murray street. Quinlan, he said, offered him $4, which he refused.

To Mr. Ritchie, the witness said Gallagher did not say what happened the money; he mentioned only Quinlan's name. Bernard Barry, aged fifty, and James Kelly, aged thirty-seven, were fined $4 each for drunkenness.
