THE FAISLEY SHAWL.

The story of the Paisley shawl - a specimen has just been presented to the Paisley Museum - forms one of the shortest and most romantic chapters in the modern history of the shawl. The manufacture of these beautiful things was begun, reached a great height of prosperity, and is likely ever to leave the Paisley shawl has been woven since the time of the shawl. The shawl had its origin in the ambition of the Paisley weavers to design and produce a shawl which excelled its prototype in beauty of design and richness of color. Their success was the reward of patience, skill, taste, and a delicacy of touch which, ex-perts say, has probably never been equalled before or since in the weaving craft. A common price for one of these shawls in the days when they were worn by women of all classes in Scotland ex-cept the very poor. Then fashion de-cided that the Paisley shawl should no longer be the mode and its fate was sealed.

Queen Victoria gave the dying indus-try a new but brief lease of life when she bought seventeen of the famous shawls and wore one at the baptism of the prince who was to become King Edward.

The exhibition was a most creditable one. Thirteen centres competed, and that number of times you watched groups of eight girls dance the "Irish Lilt" until the rhythm crept into you and try it, too. The "moss" went East Riverdale. Oiler centre came second, and Carlton Park third.

Miss Pearl Oiler, from Roden, and three other clever girls who gave solo dances were Leona Hall, as Bo-Pep, from McCormick centre, while quite a bonny Highland dancer, and three more street centres, while quite a bonny Dutch pair, Ellen Viver (girl) produced on the loom the amazing and Violet Nixford (boy), also came from Moss Park centre.
