Poetry.

VERSES.

"The grey-eyed morn"—"the wee short hours ayont the twal."

I love the sacred, silent hours,
That links the palms of Night and Day,
Wedding the coy reluctant powers
In bands of silver-grey.

I love them, though too oft they shake
Oblivion from its proper throne,
And bid the restless soul awake,
And the dear Sleep be gone.

The Thoughts that centre in the brain,
The Feeling lodged within the breast,
Should then awhile at peace remain,
Like fledgelings in the nest.

Yet, by their very calm, these hours
Appear to me their calm to mar,
Setting the tired corporeal powers
With active Mind at war,

Quick Fancy then revives old schemes,
That died as born, all unfulfilled;
While Memory calls up dearer dreams
Of things attained as willed.

And Melancholy claims her share
In that half-sore, half-sweet unrest;
She mourns lost friends . . . . . dear
The loss that leaves them blest.

Still this grey season hath for me
A charm of deeper feelings born;
With bright peculiar thoughts I see
The rising star of Morn!

Wayfaring friends were we of old,
In summer's heat and winter's snow,
Though Hesper paced the sky in gold,
And I trod earth below.

The draught of bliss that Morning sips
Is vast as ocean in its pool;
The cup ordained for mortal lips,
Though small, may be as full.

And of the joys for man designed,
A bounteous store fell then on me;
And, far as suits our lowly kind,
I shared the day-dawn glee.

And why was this my bosom's light?
And wherefore were my spirits gay;
As on I roamed alone by night
Upon a lonely way?

Love was the power that led me on—
Love was the lamp that lit my path—
Love made long miles seem light as none—
By mount, and moor, and strath.

Oh! fair was she to whom I gave
The first love of my fervent years—
Not such as springs from out a grave,
Fostered by widowed tears!

Oh, she was fair! Those dark bright eyes,
The veined marble of that brow,
That cheek of rarely blended dyes,
Those lips—I view them now!

Alas! these sweets, once so far mine
As modest love could wish or grant,
Fortune compelled me to resign—
Or fortune, or its want.

Still doth Remembrance fondly hold
By those dear times which saw me rove
By night across the lonesome world,
To taste one hour of Love!

The closing eve beheld me go;
The dawn saluted my return—
But why begin these tears to flow?
Poor heart, why idly mourn?

If she be happy, be thou glad,
Nor vainly what is past deplore!—
And yet, how may I be but sad,
Since I can love no more!

Oh! rightly have the poets sung,
That when Love's primal bloom is o'er,
The heart, where once it freshly sprung,
Can know the flower no more!

The wayside plants of Friendship—Hate—
Of common Joy and common Pain—
Once crushed, will soon resume their state:
But Love blooms not again.

It is not that my hair is grey,
Nor that my bloom is thin and cold;
Few seasons, since young Passion's day,
Above my head have roll'd.

Nor am I, if I know me well,
Of that affected whining crew,
Who rave of blights and blasts that fell
On joys—they never knew.

The cup was full, brimful of bliss,
Which it was mine erewhile to drain,
I loved—was loved:—the end is this—
I cannot love again!

BY THOMAS SMIBERT.

From the Greenock Advertiser.

THE CLIMATE OF EL DORADO.—Here is the very last story from the Sacramento. It is unquestionably true, every word of it—as all stories from that region are:—

Dan Marble met a chap direct from the gold region, full of information of that thrice-favored land.

"Healthy climate, I suppose!" said Dan.

"Healthy? it aint anything else. Why stranger, you can choose any climate you like—hot or cold—and that without travelin' more than fifteen minutes. Just think of that the next cold morning when you get out of bed. There's a mountain there—the Sawyer Navayday, they call it—with a valley on either side of it—the one hot and the other cold. Well get on the top of that mountain with a doubled barrelled gun, and you can, without movin', kill summer or winter game, jest as you will."

"What!—have you ever tried it?"

"Tried it, often—and should have done pretty well, but for one thing."

"Well, what was that?"

"I wanted a dog that could stand both climates. The last dog I had froze off his tail while pintin' on the summer side, He didn't get entirely out of the winter side, you see."

A SHARP CRITIQUE.—A Justice of the Peace, who was possessed with the itch of scribbling, and had written a book which he meant to publish sent it to Ben Jonson, for his opinion, who finding it full of absurdities, returned it with his compliments, and desired his worship would send it to the house of correction.—Bristol Mirror.

DOMESTIC BLISS.—"I can't conceive, my love, what is the matter with my watch; I think it must want cleaning" "Oh, no, Papa! I don't thing it wants cleaning, because baby and I had it washing in the basin ever so long this morning!"

Women have more strength in the looks than we have in our laws; and more power by their tears than we have by our arguments.

An old woman lately walking through one of the streets of Paris at midnight, when a patrole called out "Who's there?" "It is I, patrole; don't be afraid."

When a Baltimore girl is kissed, she says she is taking chloroform, and remains insensible as long as the operation lasts.

Mrs. Partington says that her minister preached about "the parody of the probable son."

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY FOR
Colds, Coughs, Asthma, and Consumption.

THE most celebrated and infallible remedy for Colds, Coughs, Asthma, and every form of Pulmonary Consumption, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by that eminent medical chemist, Dr. Buchan, of London, England, and extensively known as the "Great Eastern Remedy.

It has been tested for upwards of seven years in Great Britain and on the continent of Europe, where it is universally considered the great, and only remedy for this awful malady, and now introduced to the public under the immediate superintendence of the inventor. Within three years it has been distributed from Maine to Florida, and from Canada to Wisconsin, and its effects are every where alike ASTONISHING AND TRIUMPHANT.

As a preventive medicine, and an antidote to the consumptive tendencies of the climate, it is invaluable. As a remedy for severe and obstinate coughs Inflammation of the Lungs, croup, &c. it is unrevaled. But the Proprietors so confident of the merit of this great remedy, in the worst forms fo consumption, that he prefers to have it tested by the DYING INVALID, rather than by persons afflicted with some simple and less dangerous disorder of the throat and lungs:—this may seem strong language, but it is the result of experience in thousands of cases, sustained by the most intelligent and unimpeachable testimony. It is not pronounced an infallible remedy in all cases, but it is THE MOST INFALLIBLE remedy known to the civilized world. It is the best preventive of hereditary consumption—it is the best defender against the influences of climate—it is the best remedy for incipien-consumption—and it is the great and only remedy for that fearful softening of the lungs—inflammation of the membrane, and tuberculous decay, which are the last effects of that dreadful scourge, and which are erroneously supposed to be beyond the reach of medical aid:—the agent or proprietors of other and farther beyond the reach of hope.

Such is not the case with the Hungarian Balsam It is always salutary in its effects—never injurious It is not an opiate—it is not a tonic—it is not a mere expectorant. It is not intended to lull the invalid into a fatal security. It is a great remedy, a grand healing and curative compound; the great and only remedy which medical science and skill has yet produced for the treatment of this hitherto unconquerable malady. It is in fact the best remedy in the world!

[From the John Bull, newspaper, London.]

There is certainly some mysterious and occult virtue in the famous "Hungarian Balsam of Life which the medical faculty are unable to discover or Dr. Buchan would not be permitted for so many years to enjoy the magnificent monopoly of the treatment and cure of Consumption in Great Britain. No satisfactory analysis of this famous compound has ever, to our knowledge, been offered to the public.
