CARE OF THE HAIR.

At night, before retiring, brush the hair carefully and braid it loosely in a number of strands. Avoid wetting the hair too often to make it glossy, as the wetting has a tendency to make the hair coarse. Avoid putting the hair up in kinks at night to wave it. They are more harmful than even the much-abused curling iron, as the hair is twisted about the kink so tightly that it actually wears it out, and a bald spot is apt in time to be the result.

There is a new sort of a shampoo just now much in favor with women of fashion. It is known as the perfume shampoo. It consists of sprinkling the hair with orris powder, leaving the fragrant powder on long enough to collect the dust and oil, and then giving the hair a vigorous brushing. The orris shampoo, when thus taken, is quite harmless and leaves the hair with just a subtle perfume about it—Woman's Home Companion.

DON'T "ANSWER BACK."

The habit of "answering back" is reprehensible in grown people as in children and should be suppressed by every person anxious to lead a peaceable and harmonious life. The "scrappy" household in which every member strives for the last word in the argument, is most anxious to maintain an independent course of action, lest he shall be imposed upon, is not a happy one, nor can it ever become such a one. It is an odious place to visit and the separate individuals that compose it can always have a pleasanter atmosphere and time somewhere else, yet it is but seldom that any one will give up the habit or as a whole reform and institute a new order of things. There is but one way to produce a lasting result, and that is to "withhold your tongue" on each and every occasion when bitter and sharp words arise to the surface. The old adage, "It takes two to make a quarrel," is invariably true, and while silence is an aggravating response to an irritating remark, its effect is inevitable. The temptation to repudiate an unjust accusation is strong, but if it is unjust it will be regretted more than if a quarrel resulted in which both parties lost their temper. She who will inwardly determine to "withhold her tongue" from ill-natured remarks, from unkind suggestions, from bitter retort, from nagging, will begin a resolution in her own home. Do not wait for some one else to start the movement; have the joy in your own soul that you have planted the seeds of happiness yourself.—Philadelphia Ledger.

MASTER ONE THING.

Train your daughters to do some useful thing well enough to support themselves if necessary. The rich of to-day are often to-morrow's poor and the helplessness of many a woman of refinement is something sad to contemplate. W. D. Howells has thrillingly depicted the struggles of an educated and accomplished woman suddenly left penniless. She sets bravely to work to turn her accomplishments to account for self-support. First, she tries decorating pottery, but her work is not finished enough to bring her the needed income; then she tried coloring photographs, then writing for magazines, then fine millinery—always with the same result. She can do many things fairly well, but nothing well enough to be well paid for it; till at last she comes down to making cheap bonnets for servants and by that coarser work she manages to eke out a precarious existence, till the novelist, as the only way of extricating her from so trying a situation, is compelled to marry her off. Now this may be fiction, but it is not a stranger to fact. Our great cities are full of heroines of this sort. Let every woman, no matter in how comfortable circumstances her parents may be, master some one thing—no matter what; let her make her services valuable somewhere; let her know something of what Burns was pleased to call "the glorious privilege of being independent;" how calmly she could then face misfortune. She would not be compelled to marry for a living or be a burden taken off the hands of parents. A marriage for convenience, a marriage for aught but love—a free, joyful, surrender of the heart—is a humiliating stoop to the dust—a mockery that brings a blush to the angels.—Dr. Madison Peters, in Christian Herald.

THE DESTRUCTIVE MOTH.

The best way to protect garments from the ravages of this busy creature is to wrap them in newspapers, being very careful to leave not even the slightest crack by which a miller may find its way in. This should be done as early in the season as the garments can be spared, and they should be well beaten and brushed before wrapping, in order to dislodge any eggs that may already have been deposited on them. If they are put away late it is safer to open them sometime during July. The worm will then be hatched, if any eggs had chanced to be left in the garments, and can be seen and killed before it does any damage. Cedar chests are of no more use in keeping out moths than any other tight box. Gum camphor is sometimes put among woollen garments, and tobacco is also used; but though these may have some effect in keeping the miller away, they are not always safeguards, and the surest way is the simplest, that of wrapping the garments so that nothing can gain an entrance. To keep them out of carpets, sprinkle the floor with turpentine or benzine before laying it.—Ex.

Just as some people save up everything for the "rainy day," says the Hartford Post, so some housekeepers keep the best of everything tucked away for "company." You can always tell when you go into a house presided over by a hostess of this calibre. If you only go in for a formal call you'll notice that everything is piled into the parlor that has beauty or value. If you get a peek beyond the contrast will be startling, the living room will be dreary and bare and uninviting for all thought and expense has been devoted to getting up a show room to impress chance visitors. How often do we see in a window a beautiful plant or vase of flowers. From the inside it is hidden by curtains, so unless someone idly glances toward the window in passing the flowers are practically enjoyed by no one. How much more pleasure might have been extracted from them had they been put in the centre of the dining table instead of in a window for outward show.—Ex.

A little child gave a most exquisite explanation of walking with God. She went home from Sunday-school, and the mother said: "Tell me what you learned at school." And she said, "Don't you know, Mother, we have been hearing about a man who used to go for walks with God. His name was Enoch. He used to go for walks with God. And one day they went for an extra long walk, and they walked on and on, until God said to Enoch, 'You are a long way from home; you had better just come in and stay.' And he went." That was true. Enoch had become so familiar with God that he just went in and stayed.—Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D. D.

GOOD BACKBONE.

A commercial club at Pascagoula, Miss., extended an invitation to the Governor, Legislature and officers of the State to visit them and inspect their port on Saturday, February 22nd. It was accepted, not for Saturday, but for Sunday, February 23rd. Whereupon the commercial club adopted a courteous letter to the Legislature and officials, assuring them of a welcome in their homes and churches on the Sabbath, but that as the day was "set aside by both the divine and civil laws for rest and the worship of God," and the industries of the town were closed, the whole object of the visit would be defeated. So the invitation was withdrawn. Was not that well done? Now let the legislators learn the lesson. A little more backbone like this would do much to stay the flood of Sabbath desecration.—The Central Presbyterian.

WHY NOT REJOICE MORE?

Every child of God may well rejoice because he has such a Father in Heaven. "I have set the Lord always before me; therefore, my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth." In his presence is fullness of joy. This refers to the experiences of the present life, and then up at his right hand will be the "pleasures forevermore." It is a bad heart that skulks away from a loving Father in sullen distrust and dread. Then, too, what joy is kindled in our souls when we are brought into full reconciliation with God through the atoning love and redemption of Jesus Christ! The returning prodigal's heart thrills under every kiss of his forgiving Father. The assurance of a full salvation is enough to keep our hearts aglow. "I give unto you eternal life," says our omnipotent Saviour, "ye shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck you out of my hand." All things work together for good, if we love God. Every sharp pruning may make us yield richer clusters of spiritual fruit, if we will let God have his way. And when the discipline and conflicts of this earthly school life are ended we look upward, and see that "our names are written in heaven."—Theodore L. Cuyler, in the American Friend.
