THE FRIDE OF LLEWELLYN

By Mrs. E. Southworth

CHAPTER IV.
THE REFORMATION.
As soon as Arthur had left her Gladys went to her own room, and shut herself up.
"How much she had lived in the last few days! The letters from the dead, the breaking off of her marriage, the return of her betrothed. All these events had crowded her life with a host of thoughts, feelings and excitements that she could in no way bring into harmony."
All was chaos.
Restless through all this confusion of thought, she started up with the intention of going out for a ramble through the autumnal woods. But when she put her hand on the knob of her door, she found that it was locked on the outside. She was a prisoner in her own room. Now, Gladys had a high spirit—she would call it a bad temper. Finding herself subjected to the insults and inconveniences of personal confinement and restraint, she fastened, and then knocked.
"Come in," said Gladys, sharply. "Please, miss, I can't open the door."
"Isn't the key on the other side?"
"No, miss."
"Then go down to Mrs. Llewellyn, and give her my compliments, and say that I desire to see her in my own room."
"Yes, miss," said the girl, retreating.
Ten minutes elapsed, and then the sound of soft footsteps was heard approaching, a key was placed in the lock and turned, the door was opened and Mrs. Llewellyn entered, and carefully locked the door after her, and withdrew the key and put it in her pocket.
Gladys was standing in the middle of the room, with her slight figure drawn up to its greatest height, her cheeks flushed, her nostrils quivering and her eyes blazing with indignation.
"Well, my love, you sent for me. What is your wish?" inquired the lady, calmly, sinking into an easy chair.
"I wish to know, madam, what is the meaning of this insult that is offered to my father's daughter?" demanded Gladys, turning upon her.
"What insult, my dear?" coolly replied the lady, adjusting the ribbons that adorned her dress.
Gladys, speechless with rage, silently pointed to the locked door.
"Oh, if you mean that, I will tell you. Sit down, my dear—sit down. Do not stand there, burning and quivering and palpitating, like a bombshell ready to explode. Sit down, while I answer your question."
"I think, madam, that I will never sit down in the same room with you again! And I tell you now, that if I ever had any saving doubt about the history of those letters, that doubt is removed by your conduct of to-day!"
"Gladys, how dare you! What do you mean? Sit down there, if you prefer to do so. The attitude is at least more respectful. But take care that you give me no insolence. I will not bear what you are doing haughtily. Will you explain your conduct, madam?"
"Certainly. I am your legal guardian, standing in the place of your deceased parents, holding a high trust."
"A trust that you have betrayed on that point," exclaimed Gladys, with flashing eyes.
"Silence, miss! Silence, this instant! Or I will teach you not only by personal restraint, but by personal chastisement, that you are absolutely in my power, and bound to obey my will. I will have you to reflect upon this when you profit by your may, and when you are in a meeker mood I will come to you again," said the lady haughtily.
And with these words she withdrew from the room, and locked the door behind her leaving Gladys transfixed with amazement and burning with rage.
"Good Heaven!" exclaimed the girl, starting and rushing up and

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for women's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.
Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

SCHELL BROS.

down the floor. "Am I awake or is this a hideous, mocking dream? What was that she dared to say? Or could I have heard aright? Did she threaten me—with personal?—Al! the wretch! If she had laid the weight of her hand upon me I should have— Now I know how it is that people may be driven to— To threaten me, me who was never degraded by a blow in all my childhood and infancy! Me whose person was always sacred from such violence, even by my own mother and father and nurse! Heavens! If she had struck me, I should have— Yes, I should have killed her! Yes, she said this in the transports of her rage, Gladys threw back her head. And as she she did so, her eyes fell upon a picture hanging above the mantelpiece. As she looked upon this picture she became perfectly still, her face that was convulsed with rage grew calm, the fire died out of her blazing cheeks, tears filled her eyes.
"Heaven forgive me," she softly breathed, "Heaven forgive me. What an I, poor child of dust, that I should grow furious at the bare threat of an outrage that Thou, the Son of God, didst bear without a murmur? Oh, Saviour, by Thy infinite love, give me a portion of Thy infinite meekness," said Gladys, sinking on her knees and melting into tears.
What was the picture that had moved Gladys so deeply? That had arrested her, in the very tempest and whirlpool of her passion and had softened and subdued her, and brought her to her knees?
It was a simple engraving from "Ecco Homo" of Correggio. It represented our Saviour bleeding from the recent scourging, crowned with thorns and wrapped in the mocking purple robes at the moment Pilate presented him to the Jews saying: "Behold the man." The artist had caught the spirit of the text, and the divine patience in that picture face subdued the angry passions of the beholder.
When Gladys arose from her kneeling posture, she sat down by the open window, and leaning her elbow on the sill, looked out upon the peaceful scenes of nature. Unders her eyes lay the ornamental ground, immediately around Kader Idris.

Will Anyone Else Do?

IN placing a Long Distance telephone call, users sometimes ask to speak to a particular person in the distant city, whereas it would serve their purpose equally well to talk to anyone else at that person's telephone or in his office.

"Particular person" long distance service takes from 2 to 5 times as much circuit time as a call from telephone to telephone, and the operating labor is much greater.

Oftentimes of course, "particular person" service is necessary. We suggest, however, that where possible when placing a long distance call you tell the operator that "anyone at that number will do."

The saving of time is worth while.
