

Malton midgets in Swedish tourney

A group of Malton hockey players were sure to pack their long underwear when they left for an overseas hockey tournament last week.

Malton Shoppers Drug Mart, a Mississauga Hockey League minor midget team, left on Christmas Day for Lindingo, Sweden, to participate in a tournament on an outdoor arena.

The Malton team was faced with having to adjust to playing on the larger European ice surfaces and also playing outside in sub-Arctic temperatures.

Most Swedish minor hockey teams play on outdoor artificial rinks, according to Mississauga Hockey League president John Emow who helped start the practice of Malton and Swedish hockey teams exchanging visits.

"When the Swedish teams came over (to Mississauga) they found it hard to breathe inside (the indoor arenas) and keep up with the pace after being used to the fresh air," Emow said.

"But it doesn't take too long to adjust either way."

Malton is the third Mississauga team to visit Lindingo since 1979 and the first to participate in a tournament.

Malton will play two teams from Stockholm, the host Lindingo team and a team from Finland in the tournament.

"They (Swedish teams) can skate and pass with any MHL team," says coach Roland Park. "The only difficulty they have is finishing off their plays. They haven't got that final drive to keep going to score."

"It's going to do the kids a helluva lot of good," he adds. "It's educational since they'll see how other people live and they'll pick up on the hockey styles of the teams."

Park says he's impressed with the Swedish minor hockey system, which endeavors to keep teams together for as long as possible and bring players along slowly. He likes the way they emphasize skating and enjoys the amount of practice ice the teams get.

Lindingo, for example, practices three to four hours a week compared to Malton's one hour a week of practice time.
