Anecdotal

'According to "Harper's Magazine," a certain teacher of English in a school of high rank in her native State. Mississippi, who, in spite of her vivacity in conversation, is perhaps, if anything, too fastidious in her choice of words, was spending the summer at the New York Chautauqua. Her flow of spirits made her the delight of the dining-table at which she was first seated, but at the end of a fortnight she was moved by her landlady to another place. A lady from Boston who had been sitting opposite the South-erner expressed her regret at the change. "I am so sorry you are going to leave us," she said, with warmth; "we have all enjoyed your dialect so

Mr. Baring Gould tells a story about the Vicar of Helland, Cornwall, and his neighbor, the Vicar of Blisland. The former was going to London, and hoped that the Archdeacon of Cornwall could be induced to take his ser-vice on the Sunday following so that he might stay away a few extra days. He left it to his neighbor at Blisland to negotiate the little arrangement, and asked to be informed how things went by telegram. All went well; and the Vicar of Blisland gave in a telegram at the nearest office: "The Arch-deacon of Cornwall is going to Helland. You need not return." But when delivered in London the words were thus "The Archdeacon of Cornwall is going to Hell; and you need not re-on Mascagni, the composer, who is soon to visit the United States, is going the round of the newspapers in Italy, where it has created an extreme ly bad impression. The distinguished Italian was the guest of honor at a soiree given by the theatrical artists of the Austrian capital, and expressed regret that he was unable either to speak or understand German whereupon an actor of comic parts arose and addressed him very solemnly, saying: "Most illustrious maestro, you have given to the world 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' which is a musical freak.' At this point Mascagni also rose, and warmly shook the orator's hand. "You have no other talent than that of selfadvertisement." Another effusion on the part of the composer. "In a word, you are merely a genial sausage." Pro-longed applause, at which Mascagni could scarcely master his emotion.

A story of a "joke" played in Vienna

Adelina Patti is, as all the world knows, one of the most charitable women in the world, and nothing pleases her more than to do a good turn "on the quiet," as she herself laughingly puts it. Last winter she was staying for a few days in an isolated village at the extreme end of Yorkshire. To kill the monotony of the place, the great singer went one night to a concert got up in aid of a certain village institu-tion. Not half the performers turned up. Seeing the difficulty in which the chairman and committee were placed. Madame Patti (incognito, of course) offered to oblige them with a song or two if they cared about it. After she had rendered, in her own glorious way, three of her sweetest ballads, the chairman approached her, and, in solemn tones, thanked her: "Well, Miss, you've done oncommon well; and, although 'Arry 'Ock, the juggler, who thinks nowt of takin' 'old of 'ot pokers

Colonel Osio's strict regime has been very severely criticized, but that the King remembers him with respect, if not with affection, is proved by his having conferred the hereditary title of count up-on him on the occasion of the birth of the Princess Yolanda. One day a request came from a well-known person age for the young prince's autograph, to be added to a collection containing that of his grandfather and his father. The prince was about to comply, when the colonel said, sharply: "Certainly not; what value has the signature of an insignificant boy who does not even know how to write properly?" For some act of disobedience a little later the prince was brought before his "gov-ernor," who exclaimed: "If I were the King I would cut off your head." "And I will cut off yours when I am king, defiantly replied the lad. His punishunrecorded, but, instead of

During the famous Douglas and Lincoln debate and subsequent campaigns the point was frequently brought out by the supporters of "the Little Giant" that Mr. Lincoln had served only a single term in Congress, but that Senator Douglas had enjoyed for years a national reputation. This point, says a writer in "Lippincott's," was urged in a heated discussion between an ar-dent supporter of Douglas and a German voter who favored Lincoln. Fin-ally the former, thinking to overwhelm his opponent, said: "Who is this Lincoln, anyhow? Nobody ever heard of him until Senator Douglas brought him into notice by holding a joint debate with him. Senator Douglas, on the other hand, is a great statesman. Why, he has had his eye on the Presidential chair for the last ten years!" "Vot is dot you say?" was the reply. "You say Meester Dooglas have hat his eye on der Bresident chair for ten years?"
"Yes, that is just what I said." "Vell you shoost tell Meester Dooglas if he vill keep his eye on dot chair sho leedle vile longer he vill see old Abe Lincoln sitting down in it." This closed the debate, amid a roar of laughter from the bystanders.

His Impression.

"Do you believe that college-bred women make good wives?"

"I don't think going to college makes the slightest difference," answered Mr. Meekton. "You couldn't keep a woman from assuming a position of superior knowledge by merely not sending her to school."— Washington "Star."

The Definition.

Teacher—Johnny, can you tell me what is meant by "steward?" Johnny—A steward is a man who doesn't mind his own business. Teacher—Where did you get that idea? Johnny—Well, I looked it up in the dictionary, and it said, "A man who attends to the affairs of others."—Cape "Register,"

Wasted Nerves and Weakened Bodies Give way to Suffering and Disease-The Action of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

There are hosts of people who are susceptible to attack of various kinds of illness. Their systems are ever ready to take on disease. They bend under the slightest trial, and their health is jeopardized by every trivial exposure. They lack resisttrivial exposure. They lack resisting power, and health declines because there is no nerve force to make good the waste by disease.

At first slight weakness, stomach annoyance, headache, heart fluttering, trembling of the hands and limbs, resting—that something is nerve force. Until the stock of nerve force is replenished the pace of de-clining health will increase, until lost vitality is expressed in every Pale, flanguid, nerve-shattered people find exactly what they require in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It supplies the wants of wasted nerves, rebuilds the wasted cells, and renews the blood. Its wonderful cures are due to the fact that it restores natural nerve force, and it is lack of nerve force that causes most suffering these days. Brain nerves, heart nerves, stomach nerves, give out, and all sorts of trouble follow.

Mr. M. A. McCrea, Troy Hill, Ont., writes:—My system was all run down when I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was weak and very nervous and I felt so tired and worn out that I could scarcely drag myself about the house. It drag myself about the house. It seemed impossible for me to get rest or sleep at night, I felt that I was gradually growing weaker and more nervous and irritable. Since be-ginning the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I feel altogether different. It has gradually strengthened my nerves and built up my system wonderfully. I sleep well now, and am being thoroughly restored to health and strength. I believe it is the best medicine to be had for the WOMEN WHO WEAR WELL. It is astonishing how great a cliange few years of married life will make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach that is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. Advice to Mothers.

If your little boy or girl comes home If your little boy or girl comes home with a sore throat, the first thing to do is to rub the throat and chest with Polson's Nerviline. Don't be afraid to use Nerviline freely—a whole bottle full wouldn't burn or blister the tenderest skin. Rub in until all taken up by the pores, and just before the child goes to sleep give him a glass of hot goes to sleep give him a glass of hot water into which 30 drops of Nerviline has previously been stirred. This is a sure, pleasant and speedy cure. Large bottles 25 cents.

PROBABLY no human invention has aided the course of justice to a greater extent, says London "Tit-Bits," than the snapshot camera. It has been instrumental in condemning criminals, and has also been the means before now of saving innocent lives.

A case in point is that of Alfred Grayson, an Englishman who was liv-ing a few years ago at Rio de Janeiro. He was accused of the murder of a Brazilian named Linares, a clerk in the same office with himself. The two were known to have quarreled some days previous to the Sunday on which Linares met his death. Apparently, however, they had made up their differ-ence, for they went out sailing that day on a small yacht which Grayson had hired.

In the evening Grayson brought the dead body of Linares home. His story was that the latter had fallen from the mast and fractured his skull. But medical evidence was of opinion the wound on the head had been made with stick or oar. An oar was missing from the yacht's dingey. The mast-climbing story, too, sounded improbable, for the rigging was all worked from deck. Taking the recent quarrel into consideration, and Grayson's well-known violent temper, the case was black, indeed, against the Englishman. coroner's jury had already found him guilty of murder, when a passenger on a Marseilles steamer, which had arrived in Rio on the Sunday afternoon, came forward with a new piece of evi-

This was a snap-shot photograph taken as the vessel entered the harbor. Far away, under the cliffs, a tiny vessel. sel was sailing, and against the white sail was a dark mark, which a powerful magnifier proved to be a falling man. By an almost miraculous coinci-dence the camera had been snapped just as Linares fell. The photograph turned the scale in Grayson's favor.

Almost equally curious is the way in which a photograph aided justice in the Cooper nurder case. Cooper was assistant to a young blacksmith named McKenna in a Lanarkshire village. Both men were known to be fond of the same girl. One day Cooper was found dead on the floor of the smithy. He had been poisoned with carbolic acid. McKenna was suspected, but there was no proof whatever of his having ever bought or owned any carbolic acid, while Cooper was known to have purchased, as a toothache reme-dy, the phial found beside his dead body. "Death from misadventure" was the verdict.

Shortly afterwards McKenna was arrested. It appeared that an English tourist provided with a kodak had passed through the village on the very morning of the murder. Attracted by the quaintness of the old forge, he had taken several snap-shots of it. The photographer went on to stay in an out-of-the-way part of the Highlands, and did not hear of Cooper's death for some days. Then he hastened to develop his plates. Plain in one of the pictures were three bottles on a shelf. Two were beer bottles, the third was unmistakably one of those fluted blue glass bottles in which poisons are sold. It had also a label on it, and though the wording on this could not be read, yet on the strength of this evidence the police made a thorough search of Mc-Kenna's premises. They found the remains of the bottle in question in an old well, and proved that it had contained carbolic acid. Then McKenna confessed his guilt. The more recent developments of scientific photography must make the criminal feel less secure than he used to. One of those thieves who make a living by van-robbing got an unpleas-ant shock one day in March last. He had safely got off with a tub of butter which he had stolen from the tail of a wagen as it was crossing a bridge in Rochester, N.Y. The deadly witness against him was a photograph taken by telephotography from the top of a eighboring high building. A biograph picture of the Grand Trunk Railway bridge over the Niagara Gorge was recently taken, and when developed, thrown upon the can-vas at a music hall at Toronto. It was then noticed for the first time by the audience that a human body was ing and spinning in the whirling waters. Search was at once made, and the body of a missing and much-advertised suicide was discovered, still caught in the furious suction of the whirlpool.

Hindu criminals succeed by long practice in forming a little bag in their throats into which they can guide jewels when they steal them. Last Sep tember a native was arrested for stealing a diamond worth 10,000 rupees from a jeweler's window in Calcutta. But as the evidence was only circumstantial, and possession unproved, he would have been liberated had it not occurred to the police to have an X-ray photograph taken of his throat. That showed the gem safely hidden in the little sac. The thief was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, but he still refuses to give up the diamond.

The Roentgen-ray photography has also been instrumental in adding sev-eral thousand pounds to the customs revenue of Buenos Ayres within the last year. Valuable jewelry on which no duty was being paid was known to be coming into the country in letters. It is, however, illegal to open letters or stamped packages, so the law-break-ers were unchecked. At last, in June, 1900, several registered letters and packages were examined under X-rays in the presence of the Argentine Post-master-General. Sixty-six suspected packages contained £4,000 worth of jewelry, and were, of course, all con
