How Foreign Missionaries Unin tentionally Cause War and

The Propagation of the Society and the state of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, which took place in this city. The Premier apologized for his presence, because, he said, missionaries were not popular at the Foreign Office. Referring to China, he remarked that, though the persons slaughtered had been Christian and the company of the persons slaughtered had been Christian and the company of the company tians, it must not be imagined they had been murdered simply because the Chinese dislike their religion. It was because the idea prevailed there and elsewhere that missionary work was merely an instrument by which secular government achieved its objects. While this was unjust, and though the missionaries could not re-nounce their work, the utmost cau-tion ought to mark their actions, as over-zealousness led to martyrdom, and caused the deaths of soldiers and sailors sent to avenge the outrages.
