Dangerous Prophecies.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

It is when we are young that we say, "I shall never" and "I shall always"—not knowing that we are only time's atoms in a crucible of incredible change. An old man in a house dare say I have never, for he knows that if he searches he will find probably that he has. "All is change,"—Booth Tarkington.

"There's one thing I'll never do," I heard a young girl say the other day, apropos of a friend's marriage to a young man with more prospects than salary. "I'll never marry a man who is getting a cent less than $40 a week."

If it were possible for me to lift the veil that lies across my future, I would not do it. I believe most of us are happier knowing just the present, but I must say I would like to be able to look ten years ahead into that girl's future, and see if anything happens to that cock-sure assertion of hers.

I suppose you thought when you read that opening sentence that I was going to use it to launch myself into a tirade upon the extravagant matrimonial standard of the girl of today. Not at all. Of course the remark did suggest that line of thought. But as England's great story-teller so often says, "That's another story." What it set me to thinking most seriously was this: that it's mighty risky business to prophesy what we will or will not do under this or that condition.

Is there anyone among my readers, I wonder, who is not doing at least one thing which he has said he never would.

I doubt it.

Of course there's a chance that this cock-sure young person may stick to that vow, but I think there's every bit as good a chance that she won't—perhaps better.

I will remember an energetic young woman who used to be horrified because her newly married friends were paying $25 and $38 a month for rent. When she was married, she used to say, she would never pay more than $25. She is now paying $40 a month.

Another young business woman who knew too well the danger that wives run when they go serenely away for the whole summer and leave their husbands to shift for themselves was very fond of saying, "When I'm married I'll go away with my husband on his vacation and perhaps I'll stay a week or two more, but I'll never go off for the whole three months." I don't think it's right.

For the first two years of her married life she was true to that "never"; then the babies came, she wanted the country air for them, and now she goes away in May and comes back in October.

Of course she didn't reckon with the power of maternal solicitude when she made that vow; but that's just it, we never can reckon, we never can realize, just how we would feel under conditions we haven't experienced, and therefore we have no business to say what we would or would not do.

It is as if a man should pretend to solve an equation with two unknown quantities—himself and the conditions.

We know in part and therefore we ought to prophesy in part.

Or, better still, not at all.

NATURE'S LAWS.

Nature's laws are perfect if only we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to Nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries there, some of which we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the Wild-cherry tree, with mandrake root, Oregon grape root, stone root, queen's root, bloodroot and golden seal root, make a scientific, glyceric extract of them, with just the right proportions, and you have

DOCTOR PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists and pharmacists, many months of hard work experimenting to perfect this vegetable alternative and tonic extract of the greatest efficiency.

Mr. C. W. PAWLEY, of Millville, Calif., writes: "I wish to tell you that I have used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' in my family for twenty years. We have had a doctor called in but once during that time. I have a family of ten children, all well and hearty, for which, to a great extent, we owe thanks to you and your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' which we use when sick."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Horses as Gold Mines.

With the coming of the flat-racing season, the thoughts of owners and trainers of racehorses are everywhere turned towards the possibilities lying dormant in the as yet untamed sinews and muscles of their yearlings.

For some few, at all events, amongst them are probably destined to turn out veritable equine gold mines.

This is no mere figure of speech. The sums earned in one way and another by certain thorough-breds in the past almost surpass belief.

For example, St. Simon, who died at Welbeck in the early part of 1908, and who was undoubtedly the record money-making horse of his, or any other, age, earned in stud-fees alone for his dual owner no less a sum than £250,000; while his progeny netted over half a million sterling in nineteen years. And this, although he only cost originally the comparatively small sum of sixteen hundred guineas.

To find anything approaching such a record as this, it is necessary to go back to the time of Belshazzar, whose progeny won £200,000; while his own earnings, on the turf and at the stud, exceeded £100,000. And Belshazzar, it must be remembered, was bought for considerably less than a hundred-pound note.

Even lower prices than this, however, have at times been paid for horses that have turned out true gold-mines. Thus, Deadlock was sold for £20, and shortly afterwards dropped a foal, the famous Isinglass, who won the Derby of 1895 and £40,000. Queen of the Roses, again, the dam of Reve d'Or, was given away in exchange for a sack of oats. Hampton, the sire of Ladas, Merry Hampton, and many other magnificent racers, was bought for 150 guineas. While one-third of that sum purchased The Rover, whose son, the great St. Gatien, was sold for £15,000 after dead-heating in the Derby.

Then there was Stockwell, bought by Lord Exeter for £180. Stockwell not only won the St. Leger himself, but no fewer than six of his sons followed his example, while three of them won the Derby. In one year his descendants earned in stakes sums aggregating over £60,000.

Revolutionists Secured Release of Several Prisoners.

Lisbon, Portugal, April 30.—Revolutionaries by a daring plan secured the release yesterday of a number of prisoners arrested during Sunday's political disturbances in the capital and confined on the Portuguese cruiser Republic, in the harbor. Several boats filled with armed men dressed as sailors clambered on board the cruiser at two o'clock in the morning and demanded that the prisoners be handed over to them. At the same moment three shots were fired from the guns on the cruiser for what reason has not been disclosed. The prisoners were then given up by their guards to the men who had boarded the warship, and it appeared as though the affair had been carried out with the connivance of some of the officers and crew.

The Male Quartette. BY H. L. RANN.

The male quartet is a vocal m i s d e m o n — or which cannot be reached by the law and is therefore subject neither to a fine or imprisonment in the county jail. It is caused by four men with full dress suits and sliding gear standing up in a bow-legged semi-circle and trying their voices on people who would rather listen to a xylophone solo.

The male quartet consists of two tenors, a baritone and a bass, all four of whom are perfectly willing to undertake any kind of a solo. In fact, an undertaker is provided for every solo, whether the audience likes it or not. The principal charm of a male quartet is the self-possession of the entire membership, which is not disturbed by anything in vegetable form.

The first tenor is a tall, spectral wraith with a fifteen-story voice and elastic eyebrows, by which the audience can tell whether he is going to climb into the attic or has decided to stay on the fifth floor. By watching the eyebrows of a first tenor a person can tell at once when he sees a high note coming and is preparing to take a running start. Every first tenor has a porch-climbing attachment called the falsetto, which is not at all painful when it can be induced to blend with the right key.

The second tenor is a short but earnest singer with a rebuilt high baritone voice which is so used to stuff the tout ensemble so that it will stand erect. The baritone is a wide-awake and determined soloist who does not intend to be drowned out so that people can notice it. One aggressive, deep-breathing baritone, whose mind is on his business can set a pace that would dishearten a foundry whistle.

The bass is a cavernous receptacle for low notes, which he dives down for with a mellow grunt and shakes vigorously before ejecting them in the direction of the audience. He always sings a solo which sounds like a saxophone with the quinsy, and if he gets within four tones of landing in the middle of it everybody is surprised and pleased.

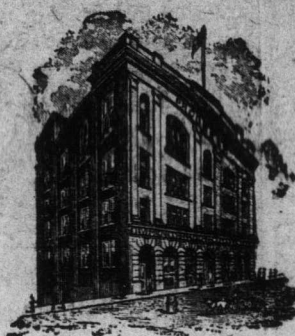

SCARLET FEVER.—Yesterday afternoon scarlet fever was reported from King's Road and Field Street. The patients were removed to the Fever Hospital.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE.—Footballers are practicing each morning on their respective grounds and an interesting series of games is expected this summer.
