Things we do Without Trying!

By RUTH CAMERON.

On a grey discourage day a basket of yellow flowers came into a sick room where the atmosphere was a little greyer and more discourage than outside.

The home-made nurse whose duties were super-added to the routine of an already overworked householder was very tired, but her face lit up at the sight of the flowers.

What the Flowers Did to the Homemade Nurse.

When she had hung the basket in the window by a bit of yellow ribbon, she stood back to get the effect. The flowers looked lovely but the shade behind them was crooked; she straightened it and then passed about the room picking up a soiled glass, straightening a crooked picture, smoothing out a disorderly pile of newspapers and magazines, and putting a fresh towel on the bureau. In a few minutes she had the room looking like quite another place.

The patient, responding to the flowers and to the new sense of order in the room, roused herself from her listless indifference to appearances to ask for a comb and mirror and other toilet appurtenances.

Half an hour after the flowers entered the room they looked down upon a patient who was taking an interest in her personal appearance for the first time since her illness, a smiling homemaker who had forgotten how tired she was, and a tidy, pleasant looking room.

What a Little Courtesy Accomplished
And they had done it all!

I was standing on a street corner the other day near a group of young boys who were slouching about in the manner of the boy who is at that unfortunate age when he thinks it manly to stand on a street corner with his hands in his pockets.
A fine looking broad shouldered young man drew near. The boys eyed him with the half furtive, half insolent gaze peculiar to the loafer. It changed suddenly to interest and attention when he greeted two or three of their number and greeted them not curtly or patronizingly but with the same cordiality and courtesy he would have extended to a friend of his own age.

He passed on, but the group did not go back to its former slouching. An electric change seemed to have passed through them. They stood more erect; several of them took their hands out of their pockets; one half smoked cigarette was thrown away; even the conversation took on a rather different tone.

When the Little Boy Forgets to Whine Once more, I know a little boy who is very difficult to manage. When his nursemaid scolds him in her high pitched, nervous voice he seems to grow more stubborn and more ugly.
His own voice rises and he snarls and frets and often has to be sent to bed.
Now there is a dear old friend of the family who loves this little boy in spite of his naughtiness. In fact, he never seems to be naughty when she is near. She talks to him in her sweet low pitched voice and he talks pleasantly to her and, forgetting to fret or whine, plays about happily and quietly. And yet, she never has to scold or discipline him.

The power of suggestion is a mighty force, isn't it? Beauty, courtesy, serenity, sweetness of character—how powerfully such qualities as these move us with their silent eloquence.

VOICE OF SPRING.

The gentle rains are falling, the voice of Spring is calling. "Get busy, sons of men! Old Winter's shed his garment, and every living varmint should look alive again!"
Get busy with your knitting! This is no time for sitting and dreaming by the stove; all Nature is exclaiming, the idle trifler shaming, "The Springtime has arrived!" The old gray hen is cackling, for once again she's tackling her great time-honored stunt; she, in her lowly station helps out the hungry nation as for the eggs we hunt. The mule works in the collar until the galled spots holter for divers healing salves; the cows are softly singing, as from the woods they're bringing their tall, long-legged calves. It is the time for tolling, that pots may all be boiling when Winter comes again; it is the time enchanting when we prepare for planting—get busy, sons of men! The voice of Spring is urging: "It is the time for springing," so tenderly she sings, "shake off the sloth of Winter, and bustle like a sprinter who's trotting for a prize!"

Shaun Aroon.

The production of Shaun Aroon by the B. I. S. Dramatic Company, at the Casino Theatre yesterday afternoon and night attracted capacity houses.
The play was under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson, and His Grace the most Rev. E. P. Roche, Archbishop elect.

"Shaun Aroon" is one of the standard types of Irish drama, with an original plot delicately seasoned with humour. The cast included Mrs. G.
Knight, Misses Vigners and Devereaux; Messrs. J. M. Atkinson, W. B.
Comerford, T. P. Halley, W. White, J. C. Pippy, P. O'Mara, W. Meahan and P. P. Moore, who played the title role in his usual inimitable style. All the characters were cleverly portrayed particularly that of "Old Hennings" by Mr. W. White was a veritable eye-lock.

During the evening specialties were given by Miss Mary Ryan, Messrs. T.
H. O'Neil, P. F. Moore, J. L. Slattery and Arthur Priestman Cameron, and were well received. The music at both performances was supplied by the Ryall orchestra and consisted of an excellent selection of popular Irish airs.

Fads and Fashions.

Flowered lawns will make up into dear little afternoons dresses for hot summer afternoons.

It is said that short-backed sailors are already here; and so are the little postilion hats.

Tartan patterns in silk and wool will be cleverly combined with plain cloth in spring models.

In the new neckwear for spring are vestees with the new military or high-turned-over collar.

The spring costume must be made of ribbed fabric, whether it be of silk, of woven cloth, or voile.

Black and white millinery so fashionable throughout the winter will be carried into the spring.

There is nothing so good for general wear and for stormy weather as the top-coat of covert cloth.

Silk ruchings, or rose quilting, as they are sometimes called, are having a great vogue as trimmings.

Wraps, suits and blouses are trimmed with frogs, cordeliers and other military arrangements.

A charming picture-book frock is of green and tan checked rib silk finished with ruffles and a fichu.

BRITAIN'S RECORD ARMY.

If Kitchener is able to carry out his programme and form an imperial army of 3,000,000 men, without counting troops in India, Great Britain will be in a condition for which its history affords no precedent. Not even when the glow of the camp-fires of Napoleon's army at Boulogne could be made out from the British shore of the Channel did the armed strength of the alarmed United Kingdom approximate the host Kitchener proposes to have ready for what he calls the beginning of the war. It will be five times as numerous as were all Great Britain's aggregate effective forces two years ago and it will have been raised without resort to conscription.
Great Britain will have "a nation in arms" a force that the strategist of Berlin never dreamed could be conjured up when they began their war incantations.—Boston Transcript.
