The necktie is usually strung around the neck between the teeth of a band collar. Perhaps the day will come when some budding genius will discover and put on the market a band-collar which will not sink its teeth into a new necktie and cause the wearer to strangle himself while in to yanking on a four-in-hand ken up by woman, who has also eized most of man's other garments.

This fatal weakness of the bandollar has made the high, stand-up variety more popular this season than ever. It is an easy matter to thread a
