The Partial Eclipse.
The partial eclipse of the sun, which took place yesterday afternoon, was viewed with much interest by a large number of Londoners. The eclipse started at 4 o'clock, but was not visible plainly in this district until sunset.

A Contradiction.
Hamilton Herald: A. R. Loudon emphatically denies the report published last evening that he has resigned his position as manager of the Grand Opera House to go into business. Said he this morning: "That is the first I ever heard of it. There is not a word of truth in the report."

A Liquor Case.
Michael Shaw and Ballantyne Woodruff, two residents of London Township, whose premises were raided earlier in the week by High Constables Hughes, Constable McLeod and Inspector Duffin, resulting in a quantity of liquor being found, it is alleged, will come up for trial today before Squire Chittick.

An Explanation.
The authorities of the Protestant Orphans' Home state that the Stevens children, who were stated in The Advertiser to have been cared for by the Children's Aid Society, were taken care of entirely in the Protestant Orphans' Home, and were not at any time in the Children's Shelter.

Goes West.
Mr. C. B. Keenleyside, B.A., of this city, left some days ago for his new home in Regina, where he assumes the duties of secretary of the Saskatchewan Social and Moral Reform Council. Part of Mr. Keenleyside's work will be the conducting of local option campaigns throughout the province, for which his gifts as a speaker will eminently fit him. Mr. Keenleyside is well and favorably known as a temperance and missionary worker in London, and the vicinity, and he will be greatly missed.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Having dissolved partnership of the firm, Tamlin & Scott, veterinary surgeons, and also the manufacturer of Doctor Scott's renowned veterinary preparations, that needs no comment, as they have proven by analysis to be the greatest preparations for what they are recommended, on the market in Canada, and will still be manufactured under the proprietor's name of Dr. J. L. Scott & Co., and handled by my representatives, I, therefore, will take charge of my office and devote my time to my profession.

I may say, for the benefit of the public, that I have passed through the experimental stage of my profession. After leaving my native city of London some years ago for the State of Wisconsin, and after four years of practice in that state, I enjoyed the confidence of the leading stockmen, along with the representatives of my profession, besides the recommendation of the governor, endorsed by the Senate of Parliament, appointing me to the highest honor the state could bestow, that of state surgeon of the State of Wisconsin. The state appropriated $1,000 a year to be used for experimental purposes for the advancement of the profession. During my experience, which falls to few, I have come in contact with practically every form of disease that has been known in North America. I have tested in all about 5,000 head of cattle for tuberculosis, both here and in the United States. I have treated some 3,000 head of dairy cows for contagious abortion, of which some of our Canadian farmers around the vicinity of London can vouch for its worth. I was called by the Warrens Brothers, of the Laurel Hill Stock Farm, to examine the most expensive team that was ever sold out of the state to the martyred President McKinley. I have been called to attend the noted race stations, Badger Boy, Badger Sprague, and other horses valued by the owners at $10,000. I was appointed the examiner for the Illinois State Live Stock Insurance Company for Wisconsin. I have been called to Chicago by the officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company to examine valuable race horses that were injured in transit and to report on their condition. I have been called professionally into the State of Michigan, and also the State of Minnesota, and 800 miles as far west as North Dakota. I also was elected president of the State Veterinary Association of Wisconsin.

I give this to the public as the standing I have enjoyed in my profession. The last three years I could only devote part of my time to it, for the reason I have been introducing my preparations on the market in Canada. My office and factory is located at 348 Talbot street, between King and York. Phone number of residence, Holmuth avenue, is 2998, and office phone 2950. As I had to have new phone numbers, and was too late for the last issue of phone book, my number will always be given you on request to central. Respectfully,

DR. J. L. SCOTT

Dockstader's Minstrels Tonight.

Minstrelsy up to the minute, true minstrelsy, minus the "bones" and "tamborines," of past decades, devoid of the old Joe Miller joke book gags; minus the ellipse of black-faced performers, with the dignified interloper as the pivot, and the jokesmiths at either end; minstrelsy in fact, that is distinctly and refreshingly different—that is the entertainment Lew Dockstader and his willing and efficient co-workers will offer at the Grand Opera House this evening.

The Minstrel King.

Lew Dockstader, Inc. Mr. Dockstader's minstrel show is staged in a setting worthy of a high-class comic opera, to begin with. The performance opens in the club rooms of the Possum Hunt Club, with the president of that organization replacing the interloper, and the stewards usurping the usual minstrel functions of the comedy end men. The costuming is said to be in keeping with the stage setting.

And after the usual form of opening a rather unique minstrel plot is worked out, hinged about a "Welsh and "Sweet Moments at Home." Mr. Rabbit" dream, involving an alrshp trip and the discovery of the north pole.

Long on comedians and strong in vocalists is Mr. Dockstader's company. In the first classification are Neil O'Brien, Eddie Master and Al Johnson, who, with Dockstader himself, constitute a notable quartette of funmakers.

Rees V. Prosser, William H. Thompson, Joe McAllum and Edward Van Roy are vocalists per excellence. Mr. Prosser, an old local favorite, will render "There Is No Love Like Mine" worked out, hinged about a "Welsh and "Sweet Moments at Home." Mr. Thompson is slated for the two beautiful ballads, "Years, Years, Years," and "Rose, Red Rose." Mr. McAllum the tenor, will contribute the old favorite, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie."
