ON WEDNESDAY, MAY 1.

An Ode.
Welcome, thrice welcome, gentle Spring.
We hail thee with delight.
Thy balmy breath, on zephyr's wing, Stern Winter puts to flight.
Thy annual visit round our earth Gladly many a longing heart;
Thy sunny smiles, thy flowers forth,
Their fragrance to impart.
When torpid nature wakes from sleep,
Touched as by magic wand, Spring sends a pulse, through rootlets deep,
By an unerring hand.
The landscape, lately brown and bare,
Puts forth the tender grass;
And hills and vales begin to wear
The hues of earth and grass.
The birds salute the coming Spring
With early songs of praise;
They come from where? upon the wing
To chant in warbling lays.
The new-born rills, from snowy peaks,
Dance in their swollen pride,
While down they rush to placid lakes
And in their bosoms hide.
The humid wind, from southern bowers,
Waves balmy upon its wing.
That gently falls with April showers,
The early gifts of Spring.
The hand unseen, that seasons roll,
Gives each its need of wealth,
To satisfy each waiting soul,
With needed food and health.
Spring, emblem of our youthful days,
The seed-time of our hope,
Thy moment spent in wisdom's ways,
At eve the harvest reaps.
Our hopes beyond the present lie, Through faith and gladness bring,
Thou seed-time here is very life,
Beyond, perpetual Spring.
J. A. S. PLATT.

Chief of Police Williams felt Robinson's hands, and pronounced them as soft as his own.

"Well, I work, my dear man; I'm no beggar," replied the prisoner, adding that his hands were naturally soft.

Robinson said he would get out of the city as fast as he could go if allowed, but "82 or 10 days" was his medicine.

"It's pretty hard to put in ten days," he said.

"It's hard on the county to have to support you. But we can't have you begging," replied His Worship.

Geo. McFarlane came here from Deroit last Monday, and had been working until Friday, when he went on a sneeze, and was found asleep on a Queen's avenue verandah.

"Fine you $2 or 10 days," said the court.

"Sir," ejaculated the prisoner, "I was never here before."

"Well, you hadn't hardly time to get here sooner." And the sentence stood.

We will offer the above for one day only.

The many friends of Mr. James Penn, an old and esteemed resident of London, will regret to hear of his death, which took place at the residence of his daughter at Port Huron on the 6th instant. Mr. Penn was a member of that distinguished corps, the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, and after serving with them for many years, in connection with the band, he retired and located in this city on Mainland street.
He was an honored member of the Pall Mall Methodist Church and Sabbath School. For years he was leader of the choir, and his ability as a musician was highly appreciated. He was a faithful Sabbath School teacher. The family who survive him are his widow, Mrs.
John Isaac, Mrs. Fortner, of Port Huron, Mrs. Reynolds, of Sand Beach, Lake Superior, Albert, of Indianapolis, and William and James, of South Bend, Indiana.

There was a large attendance at the Labor Day Demonstration Committee Friday night at Labor Hall. Delegates from the following unions were present:—Carpenters, Industrial Brotherhood, No. 7 Iron Molders, Machinists, Cigar-makers, Typographical, Amalgamated Engineers, Shoemakers, Tailors, B. of L. F. Barbers, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Timbers and Bricklayers. A communication was received from Secretary Biowine, of the Western Fair Grounds, granting the grounds for Labor Day. It was decided to get away from the old stereotyped programme and have something that will be more attractive. It was also decided to hold the afternoon and evening entertainment in Queen's Park.
The meeting adjourned until May 10.

HIS SOFT HANDS.
They Cost a Prisoner Ten Days in Jail—A New-Comer's First Offence.

Charles Robinson, a strapping farm laborer who said he had been working all winter near Ballymore, was charged with drunkenness and vagrancy at the Police Court to-day. P. C. Woolway found him begging on Dundas street late at night, but the prisoner denied this.
Afterward, however, he admitted that he begged for enough money to get a bed with, adding, in upright tone, "I'm not acclot" to tell you no lies, sir." He said he came here with five dollars, and blew it all in at over hotel bars.

Chief of Police Williams felt Robinson's hands, and pronounced them as soft as his own.

"Well, I work, my dear man; I'm no
beggar," replied the prisoner, adding that his hands were naturally soft.
