

MARJORY MOORE.

By Adeline Sargeant

He had come down to the Rectory that day in the hopes of making matters a little easier between the Rectory and the "Fall." He guessed rightly that the Drummonds would be shocked and vexed by the announcement of Mr. Hyde's marriage, a subject on which Mr. Hyde had taken nobody into his confidence. As Felix knew that the new Mrs. Hyde had many good qualities, he thought it well that he should come down to Redwood, and testify as to what he knew, which was a thoughtful and generous thing in Felix, who might naturally have been expected to feel annoyance, too. He did all that he could in the way of praising up the Squire's wife, and speedily convinced Mrs. Drummond that she must call on her as soon as possible. Mrs. Drummond was easily persuaded, because she hated to be at variance with her neighbors. She felt very quickly into Felix's way of thinking on the subject, and it was reserved for Helen to say to her cousin on Sunday morning, "You seem very anxious, Felix, that we should be friendly with Mrs. Hyde. Have you any special reason for it?" She had quick eyes, and she fancied that Felix flushed a little as he replied, "Redwood Hall is not a particularly cheerful place to live in unless it is filled with cheerful people. I think that poor Mrs. Hyde and her adopted daughter, you know, will find it a little dull."

"Her adopted daughter?" said Helen, rather strangely. "Do you mean the girl, Marjory Moore?" "Yes, I mean Marjory Moore," said Felix, looking straight before him, and there was something in his tone or in his expression which for the moment startled Helen into the conviction that Felix had a deeper interest in Marjory Moore than he wanted to betray.

CHAPTER VII. "It seems rather like a dream, doesn't it?" said Marjory. "Has the dream been always beautiful?" he asked. She gave him a smile which made his pulses leap. They were standing together in the veranda outside the music-room at Redwood Hall, but in the sunlight now, with the summer sky blue above them and the scent of the climbing roses, for which the Hall was famous, in their nostrils, Marjory, a slight and graceful figure in white, had perched herself upon the balustrade, and Felix stood beside her, his dark eyes bent upon her face, and a branch of clustering small white roses in his hand. "It is like a dream now," she said, "but you must not think that I have been dreaming all the time. I have worked very hard, and have been tired and disappointed sometimes. It is only now, when I come back to Redwood, and see the roses growing, that I feel as if it were a dream."

"This is a dream then, and the past is the reality?" "Well, yes, I think so. This is beautiful, though it isn't my real life, you know. My real life is music."

"Which means something more than enjoyment of music, I suppose?" said Felix, interrogatively. "Yes," she said, "it means long wrestling with difficulties, and hard practising, and stuffy rooms, and stupid pupils, and quarrellings, and bickerings, and jealousies. That is the lower side of it, you know. There is another side of it as well."

"That is what I always felt about the life of a professional musician," said Felix. "There is a higher side of it, no doubt, but it must be greatly obscured sometimes."

"It may be obscured, but you have the comfort of knowing that it is always there," said Marjory, looking away from him. "Then you are not tired of the life?" he asked her. "Not yet," she said, shaking her head, seriously. "I love it, in spite of all its drawbacks."

FOR MURDERING HIS UNCLE.

The Crime for Which Jean Baptiste Guillemain is on Trial at St. Hyacinthe.

St. Hyacinthe, Que., June 28.—The Crown at the assizes here yesterday made a start in its task of attempting to prove the guilt of Jean Baptiste Guillemain for the alleged murder of his uncle, Jean Baptiste LaPlante, near St. Liboire, on Oct. 30th last. No previous trial here has ever attracted such large crowds. Efforts proved futile in preventing the prosecution from establishing a series of facts, circumstantial, may be, but well calculated to carry weight with a jury. At least sixty witnesses will be examined and the trial will occupy about two weeks.

The Crown prosecutor stated in a case to the jury. He said Guillemain left Bidford, Me., on Oct. 4th for St. Liboire. On reaching his destination the prisoner proceeded to the dwelling of his uncle, LaPlante, where he remained during the night. On the morning of the 5th he was seen by a neighbor, who declared Louis Trevaux, a neighbor, was the guilty party. The Crown prosecutor then pointed out that the deceased, after receiving $200 in bills of the Eastern Townships Bank at St. Hyacinthe on Oct. 30th, had returned home the same day, and was seen alive and well a short distance from the LaPlante household. Without doubt a murder had been committed, and the Crown prosecutor proceeded to attack the responsibility to the accused. In conclusion, the Crown prosecutor dealt with the possession by Guillemain of bills identical with those stolen by LaPlante, also the contradictory stories and confessions related in question.

The widow of the deceased was then called. Her husband, she said, had about $3 in his possession when he left for St. Hyacinthe. Mr. P. K. LaPlante, the father of the murdered man, related with circumstantial detail, how he had loaned LaPlante $200 in St. Hyacinthe on the afternoon of October 30th. Joseph Morin, who witnessed the transaction, gave corroborative evidence. The money was drawn from the Eastern Townships Bank. It consisted of a bill of $100 and a bill of $100. Oscar Ledoux, paying teller of the bank, recalled having paid J. K. LaPlante $200 on October 30th, but could not now swear respecting the denomination of the bills. Mr. LaPlante, sr., accompanied his son to the bank. The money was paid on presentation of a check.

Mr. Treder Agervais, merchant, of St. Liboire, told the court that he met the deceased in St. Hyacinthe on October 30th and paid LaPlante an obligation of $14. Ephrem Dupok, merchant, St. Liboire, testified that he met LaPlante at the village station, about six o'clock on the fatal night. They had a talk and parted. Later LaPlante called at the store and made a purchase. Before the deceased left Joseph Dupont entered the store and engaged in conversation with LaPlante. The witness was busy, and paid little attention to what was being said. He did hear them discuss money matters. LaPlante took his departure alone.

The most interesting evidence of the sitting was given by Homsdais Lapierre. While driving in company with William and Gideon Bienvenu along the highway, between 6 and 7 o'clock in the evening, he recognized in the darkness Henry Beaupre seated on a load of hay going in the opposite direction. This was at a point a few rods from the LaPlante dwelling. Further on, a minute later, near the junction of the roads, where the deceased resided, Lapierre's horse reared at an object in the darkness. The trio dismounted and discovered the prostrate form of a man. It was impossible to distinguish the form in the darkness. The witness turned the horse's head towards the LaPlante house, and hurriedly explaining his mission, asked for a lantern. Madame Guillemain at once exclaimed, "Oh, I hope it is not my husband. I am expecting him from St. Hyacinthe. All this time Guillemain sat, with the children beside the stove. The prisoner afterwards took down the lantern, and in attempting to light it, turned the electric down into the oil. LaPlante was accordingly obliged to seek a light at Nadeau's, the nearest neighbor. On joining his companions, the body on the road was found to be LaPlante's. Although the body was still warm, it appeared to be extinct. LaPlante lay on his back, with legs crossed. The face was covered with blood, still streaming in the hair. The witness summoned Dr. Berthiaume from the village without delay. In cross-examination, he said it was impossible that the shaft of the rig had caused the fatal result, as the horse shied when several feet from the body. Gideon Bienvenu gave corroborative testimony.

Henry Beaupre, laborer, from St. Liboire, said he was walking towards the village, accompanied by his two brothers, who occupied a load of hay, when they passed LaPlante, going towards the LaPlante dwelling. It was quite dark. He did not speak. He also noticed that an individual considerably lower in stature, followed LaPlante, at a distance of three or four feet. The incident, of course, made no impression on him at the time. The spot where he encountered the two pedestrians was between seven and eight arpents from the LaPlante house. A few minutes later, further on the road, he met an express, containing Lapierre and the Bienvenu brothers.

The witness was then asked if the figure he had observed following LaPlante was like Guillemain. "Yes," replied the witness, "the man I met was about the height of the accused."

FREE PRESS CORRESPONDENCE

SENSELESS TALK. To the Editor of the Free Press.

Dear Sir.—As you have kindly given your columns to the discussion of prohibition, I will state my views thereon. In the first place, I think it is wrong for our Government to propose taking a prohibitory to put a quarter of a million dollars. Men, when elected to any office, should use their own judgment, and not come back to the people to decide for them. I say, if we want prohibition we will have to elect prohibitionists. I believe in temperance in all things. I do not think the law with regard to prohibition is not right. Instead of imposing a fine of $5 or $10, we might have an institution where men might be compelled to carry out their duty. I do not think prohibition is a line with God's plan. When we think of where our Saviour was born, and the first miracle He performed, we may learn that it is not the use, but the abuse, that was tainted against. It seems to me that no church or minister is taking the right way when they advocate prohibition, when we consider what it means. In the first place, it would deprive a number of people of their homes. As a worker for the Master I am not above trying to lead the hotel men to the Saviour, but if I find that prohibition it would seem hypocritical to me for to approach such a man (or men) on the subject.

I am a farmer; my hardest work comes in the heat of summer, and I think it no sin to take a glass of ale, port or beer in the heat of the day for my health's sake. I can do so with a clear conscience, and with the sanction of God's Word. If some of our preachers, or prohibitionists, had less theology and more practical knowledge of the man, it would be better. I would like to see more men like the Apostle Paul, that would work with their hands in the ministry at least a day or two each week. They would not have a better effect; at least, they would know better the need of laborers. I am free born, and I do not believe in that freedom, and want no man to come into my home and say what I am to do with my apples. "I will be a slave," I say. Thanking you for space.

A SUBSCRIBER.

THE SYNOD AND PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of the Free Press. Dear Sir.—As a member of the Synod of Huron, will you allow me to correct a wrong impression which has been created by the Synod's action in passing the report of the committee on temperance. Because the Synod agreed to drop from that report the clause referring to prohibition, and to assent to the recommendation to consider such system as the Gethenberg system, it appears to me that the Synod was as a whole against prohibition, and that the Bishop of Huron stood almost alone in his strong advocacy of its claims. While on the one hand, the Synod was in favor of prohibition, and there is no discredit to those who so believed it, I am bold to state that the Bishop was not a member of the Synod, nor did the Synod actually pronounce itself against prohibition.

The question of prohibition was not separately brought before us for our decision, but in its place, as if acceptable of such a law might be passed, the Gethenberg system was taken up upon the question of prohibition, so that it cannot be said whether there was a majority either for or against it. The clause referring to prohibition was expunged not because there was a majority against prohibition, but because there was a desire on the part of all to allow to remain the report of the committee on temperance, and to assent to the recommendation to consider such system as the Gethenberg system. So far it could go as a unit; further than this it would not proceed. The Synod seemed to be not so much whether we were for or against prohibition, as to how far we could go together in favor of further temperance legislation. We could advance as a unit as far as to consider the before-mentioned system. But no man could listen to the tremendous, prolonged applause which followed the endorsement of the Gethenberg system, and be more than persuaded that a large and enthusiastic number of the members of the Synod were in favor of prohibition. I regret that the issue before us had not been first and foremost directly, unambiguously for or against prohibition. I regret that the prohibition clause was allowed to be struck out, but much more I regret that that which was done in the spirit of fairness, that that might not so forth as a pre-arrangement of the whole Synod upon which there was a division. It should now be so largely accepted as a recommendation of the whole Synod, the Bishop and a few others excepted, against prohibition. I state again, that upon the actual question of prohibition no vote was taken, and I believe, question being taken, where there would certainly have been a division, a majority would have been given in favor of temperance legislation. Thanking you for space given.

I am, yours truly,

A HOSPITABLE PEOPLE.

To the Editor of the Free Press. Sir.—Being a reader of your paper for the last twenty-five years, I would like the following written up and printed in your style. To show how we have had first rate treatment while visiting here in the States, and to show the friendly feeling towards people from the Canadian side, I, William Brown, am visiting relatives and friends at Glade and Sugar Run, near Warren, Warren Co., Pa. I arrived at Glade on Monday, June 27th, of the same week, at about 8 o'clock, the front door bell rang out in a loud peck and there was a clamor at the door. These were answered, and about fifty friends came in with ice cream, cake, etc. A very enjoyable time was had. The evening's socializing exercises with "God Save the Queen." In "the" we sat for several hours, and departed to our several homes happy and contented. I hoped that Canada and the United States would be more friendly, and be said "Good-bye."

Be sure and print this and oblige, yours,

"CAN'T CHANGE IT."

There's Only One Way to Cure Dyspepsia and Biliousness.

That is by Using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—They Cure by Removing the Cause of the Trouble—And They Always Cure.

If your wife were ill with pneumonia, and the doctor gave you a prescription, you would not allow the druggist to give medicine different to that called for by the prescription. If he were to say:—"I can give you something better than this, for pneumonia," you would answer:—"Kindly give me exactly what that prescription asks for. Dr. A.—not you—is treating this case."

When you, or any member of your family, need a remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Catarrh of the Stomach, Flatulence, Heartburn, Hiccough, Headache or any other stomach complaint, don't let the druggist, nor anyone else, persuade you to take anything but Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a "patent medicine." They are a specific medicine made from a special prescription for the positive and absolute cure of the diseases named.

If you take anything else, you are betraying what your prescription calls for.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, etc., by the only possible method of doing so—that is by removing their cause.

If you have a decayed tooth that aches, the dentist pulls it out, and cures your toothache.

Similarly, Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cure dyspepsia, by removing its cause, which is imperfect digestion.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cure Dyspepsia, etc., by digesting the food. This does, Dyspepsia cannot return, for the stomach the stomach in shape to do its work thoroughly.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists at fifty cents a box, six boxes $2.50, or sent, on receipt of price, by The Dodd's Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto.

NOT MUCH TO DO.

But Talkative Aldermen Hinder Business in the Next Room.

Board of Works Session at Which Some Matters of Unimportant Nature Were Wiped in the Slate.

The Board of Works met last evening, and while no business of great importance was transacted, some of the members talked so loudly as to delay the business of a committee meeting in the next room. Ald. Douglass presided, and also present were Ald. Belton, Carrothers, Dreaney and Cooper, Secretary Bell and City Engineer Graydon.

A petition was received from residents of Queen's Avenue, between Wellington street and Park avenue, against the laying of an artificial walk.

Mr. Crawford, one of the petitioners, said the present board walk had been laid on the north side of Queen's Avenue, between Waterloo and Colborne streets, and on the north side of Wolfe street.

The pay sheet showed that some of the workmen were receiving pay for overtime work.

Ald. Cooper moved that no pay be given for overtime.

The Engineer—they are underpaid the foremen have a soft snarl.

Ald. Dreaney complained that Mr. Adams had been put to work that a stone crusher should have to do on the stone crusher.

Ald. Cooper raised a row over the cleaning of the stone crusher engine.

Ald. Douglass said that Mr. Adams should have to do on the stone crusher.

Ald. Cooper intimated that he would not move any more stone crushers, done until another macadam road is called for. He complained that the management of the crusher was not equal to last year.

Mr. McCulloch, Stinson and Belts, residents of the east side of the Adelaide Road, between Byron and Euclid avenues, complained that the grade of the road in front of their property was such as to cause them damage.

The City Engineer told Mr. McCulloch that he could not expect the city to build their roads to suit every hole in the ground. The committee will visit the locality. The road was graded up when the street railway was not down.

ADJOURNED.

CONSERVATORY GRADUATES.

Give a High Class Entertainment at the Auditorium—Miss Francis Wins the Gold Medal.

A very large crowd of musical enthusiasts greeted the three graduates of the Conservatory of Music at their piano and vocal recital last night in the Auditorium. The program was the most enjoyable one in every respect. The vocalist, Miss Margaret Cowan (A. L. C. M.), sang with delightful sweetness, and won fresh laurels in the competition for the "Barron" gold medal. At each succeeding number the audience encored still more vigorously. The pianist, Miss Beatrice Gibson (A. L. C. M.), and Miss Lottie Francis (A. L. C. M.) did themselves great credit. Miss Gibson shows, by her technique, a charming touch. Her runs were delightful in their crispness and evenness, and the charm of her playing was the excellent tone shading. Miss Francis also played in such an artistic and matured manner to elicit the appreciation of the large audience. She has great technical capacity, which she demonstrated to every advantage in the extremely difficult numbers which she played. The graduates were the recipients of hearty encores and many beautiful bouquets. After the program had been concluded, Mr. Barron mentioned the name of a well-known Toronto musician, who was unable at the last moment to judge the competition for the "Barron" gold medal. However, the accomplished musician, Mr. St. John Hyttenrauch, was chosen as the judge. After hearing the excellent work, Mr. St. John decided in favor of Miss Francis. Following is the programme of the evening:—

- Concerto, F moll (1st movement).....Chopin
- Miss Beatrice Gibson.
- Album Leaf, Op. 2, No. 1.....Chopin
- Violin Obligato by Madame Hausch.
- Consolation, No. 6.....Liszt

- Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. XI.....Liszt
- Miss Lotta Francis.
- "May Morning".....Denza
- Miss Margaret Cowan.
- A Romance, F sharp.....Schumann
- Novellette, D major.....Schumann
- Scherzo, Op. 29.....Chopin
- Miss Beatrice Gibson.
- "Love in Springtime".....Arditi
- Miss Margaret Cowan.
- Violin Obligato by Madame Hausch.
- Nocturne, G major.....Chopin
- B. Etude, "Revolutionary".....Chopin
- Concerto, A moll, Op. 16.....Grieg
- Miss Lotta Francis.

WERE NOT SORRY.

The Cancellation of the Sham Fight at Springbank.

Is Not Regretted by the Men in Camp—A Rents March—Oxford Rifles Strike Camp Today—The Jumbo Battalion at the Barges—Inspection of the Batteries.

The soldiers in camp on Carling's Heights did not express profound sorrow when they learned that a sham fight would not be held at Springbank on Friday. On the contrary, they were overjoyed at the battle being called off, as it would have meant a long march, and movements at Springbank which would have tired them out. They are not at all pleased with the idea of a route march in the afternoon, but of the two they much prefer the latter. A half holiday would please them better than anything else.

Yesterday was exceedingly quiet at the camp, the Wellington Rifles being at the ranges and the batteries, the Twenty-Second (Oxford) Rifles and the Thirty-Third (Huron) Battalion being engaged in drill. The corps from Wellington marched out of camp about 6.30 in the morning, and owing to the strength of the battalion it was 6.30 or thereabouts before the ten companies had completed their target practice. Covered with dust, hungry and tired, the boys reached the camp at 7.30 in the evening. They were in good spirits and thoroughly satisfied with their work with the rifle. Some splendid scores, including a number of possibles at the different ranges, were made.

The Oxford Rifles strike camp about noon today and go to Embury, where they will be under canvas for the holiday. They will take their tents and blankets, and return them to the district stores here on the completion of the training on Saturday.

Col. Drury, of Kingston, who is in command of the artillery, is making an inspection of the batteries. The work will not be completed before the afternoon of the holiday.

Capt. Fairbanks, of the London Field Battery, is on the sick list. Half-a-dozen men were in the hospital yesterday. Fte. Anderson, of No. 1 Company, The Third Battalion, was suffering from injuries to his chest, received by falling on a tent peg.

Muncy Notes.

Muncy, June 28.—The infant son of Daniel Alberts died in Moraviantown Reserve on Sunday, while on a visit there, of blood poisoning from a scratch on his leg. Our sympathies are with the bereaved family.

A great union council of the Muncies, Chipewas and Oneidas was held on Monday at the Jubilee council house. It seems that just now the Gift office aspirants are a fever heat for the Indian agency here.

Mr. H. — of the Muncy road, has quite a few supporters, while some think that Mr. McGinnis' recommendations ought to be continued by the Department.

Mr. David Logan, a Muncy brave, is seriously indisposed.

"Judgment has been given by Mr. Justice Robertson in the suit of Tanner vs. township of Bayham; Huffman vs. township of Bayham. Judgment in actions joined together at St. Thomas. The first action was brought to recover damages for personal injuries received by plaintiff on the 24th October, 1897, while driving along the public highway towards the first and second concessions of the township of Bayham, in front of lot 3, owned and in possession of defendant Weaver, the vehicle in which plaintiff was driving having come into collision with a wooden milkstand which had been, as alleged, unlawfully allowed for several years prior thereto to remain upon the highway, by which collision the plaintiff was thrown from the vehicle and badly injured, so as to be unable to follow his calling as a blacksmith. The second action was brought by the father and administrator of the estate of Louisa Neila Huffman, who was driving with Tanner at the time of the collision, and was thrown out and killed, to recover damages therefor. Judgment for plaintiff Tanner for $500 damages and costs of his action, against both defendants. Judgment for plaintiff Huffman for $500 damages and costs of action against both defendants.

Free and easy expectoration immediately relieves and frees the throat and lungs from colds, croup, influenza of the lungs, and all affections of the throat and chest. This is precisely what Eick's Anti-Congestive Syrup is a specific for, and where ever used it has given unbounded satisfaction. Children like it because it is pleasant, and also because it relieves and cures the disease.

A week ago the little two-year-old daughter of Mr. Benjamin Eby, Bridgeport, ate strawberries, and was taken sick immediately afterwards. On Monday she died. The cause of her death is a mystery which has not yet been solved. The child was dangerously ill from the first, and a doctor was called in. The berries that the child ate were picked in her father's garden. The medical attendant was inclined to think that the child was a victim of poisoning of some description. The symptoms seemed to indicate blood poisoning. Some are of the opinion that the infant swallowed a berry containing a poisonous insect.
