A victory over whom? Over poor Mr. Greer? That was not much to boast of. It could be seen from the first that Mr. Greer was not in a position to make much of a fight. There was a victory over the Opposition certainly, but the News-Advertiser appeared at one time as if it intended to throw in that direction and that, if it does not join Mr. Beaven's corporal's guard, it is because its editor is ambitious to be a leader and not a follower. If the victory then is a great one it is a victory over the Irreconcilables who are determined to place themselves—in opposition to the Government, whether its policy is wise or unwise, whether its policy is wise or unwise, whether it does right or does on the seed to the victory of the News-Advertiser has found out the policy of the News-Advertiser has found out the policy of the News-Advertiser has found out the less than the production of one or two irreconcilables.
