MONDAY MORNING, JULY 21, 1922.

they pay more taxes than do farmers sons; and they are with them equally liable to be called on to defend the country. It is a fact that the city latifundia of militia that are always first called on when either police duty or fighting is to be done. And yet the Ontario legislature has arbitrarily declared that these young men of the cities shall not have a voice in the government of the country! Let the workmen talk the matter over in their "unions," had out what other grievances they desire to see righted, and then let them bring out a man—whether a workman or not it matters little—but a man pledged to advocate to the best of his ability such reforms.

SUNDAY RECREATION.

The recent effort of the Toronto authorities to put a stop to Sunday excursions again brings up a well worn question of civic or rather religious economy. Is it compatible with christian principles as well as good public morals that the inhabitants of our large cities who are for the most part boxed up six days out of seven, breathing in a stifling factory atmosphere, and at the office desk, should appropriate the seventh to the uses of relaxation and innocent diversion. Looking at the matter simply from a puritan standpoint we would at once conclude that such would be a violation of the Creator's law, the observance of which should be the primary end of our existence.

END OF THE CHICAGO WHEAT BOOM.

The great wheat boom in Chicago has come to an end for the present, a drop of 30 cents per bushel having taken place within three weeks. On the last day of June No. 2 spring wheat stood at $1.35 in that market and the board of trade committee fixed the settling price for the month at $1.33. The end of last week it was down to $1.02 to $1.03, with a tendency towards still lower figures. During the last twelve months millions have been made by the managers of a few several great wheat "corners" which have within that time been started and carried out to a successful close—for that—while as much money or more has been lost by those who were unfortunate enough to take the "bear" side of the market.

To some people it may appear strange how a bold operator, even with millions at the back of his combination, were actually able to get hold of and corner nearly the whole wheat crop of the North-western States. The true explanation lies in the fact that last year's crop in the whole west was an unusually short one, and that there was not really so much wheat to corner after all. The result was the joint product of two factors—first, the bona fide wheat of a very small crop in the great wheat growing regions of the west; and next, early and certain information of this fact, promptitude and boldness in action, and large command of money, on the part of the operators for the rise. Neither the short crop on one hand, nor all that the engineers of the movement could have done, on the other, would by itself have sufficed to keep up the price of wheat in Chicago, for the greater part of a year, up to figures much above Liverpool and New York prices with the freight deducted. But the two things together did it; and we may take a period of thirteen months, from the beginning of June, 1921, to the end of June, 1922, and say that it eclipses all former periods of the same length in the matter of wheat corners.

THE CATHEDRAL COMPROMISE.

It is not very complimentary to the reputation of the episcopalian clergy in Toronto and the adjacent counties that Bishop Sweetman should have seen fit to import an outsider from Montreal to fill such an important position as that of rector of St. James' cathedral. The Rev. Mr. Donnelly has, we believe, an unimpeachable record of of blameless and pious eminence. As a preacher he may not be out of place in a church which more than any other sect or denomination is remarkable for the absence of pulpit power, but we fail to see why a Toronto man was not chosen. Bishop Sweetman's main object seems to have been to insist in his own pre-emptive of making the appointment, and extending the St. James' congregation from having any voice in the selection of their pastor. A bishop ought to be "boss" and able to carry things with a high hand, or people are apt to look on him with little respect in spite of his curiously constructed hat and gaitered legs. In the church of Rome the bishop is an autocrat, whose commands all things ecclesiastical, the pope only excepted, are bound to obey. In the episcopalian church of England the bishop's authority is upheld by the state. He is appointed by the political party in office, his name being sent down by Mr. Gladstone, or whoever else is prime minister, to the ecclesiastical body which goes through the solemn farce of electing him, and prefaces it by the blasphemy of praying the Almighty to guide their choice! They dare not choose anyone but the man whom they are told to choose by the government whose paid servants they are. But the position of a bishop in England is a very lucrative one, the salary never less than ten thousand pounds a year. In Canada the bishop is elected by the synod, and as the episcopalian church is divided into the high and low church factions, a compromise is generally hit upon, and compromise men are seldom remarkable for ability. Bishop Sweetman is, as regards his episcopal position, the result of a compromise; his whole action since his appointment has been a policy of compromise. Such is his action in importing an inferior preacher from Montreal, and at the same time giving Mr. Rainsford the right of succession. It is very questionable if Bishop Sweetman has not by so doing exceeded his powers, and if his successor, as episcopalian bishop in Toronto, can be bound by his act.

SATURDAY'S DEMONSTRATION.

The demonstration of Saturday was a grand concourse in honor of the very ancient goddess Laron and a more recently begotten divinity the goddess Ustrov, both deities as universally worshipped by men. The material wants of life are a concern to us one and all, and it is by labor and labor only that these wants are supplied. Take the rich man who possesses a mansion over-looked the city and observe the sources of his delights. The massive walls of his house (in which he prides himself) were put up by stonemasons who labored day after day chipping huge blocks and cracking the smaller stones with a hammer. The great door of the main entrance (the owner delights that there's not a better in the city) was the work of five carpenters who each labored seven days before she was ready to swing on her hinges. The beautiful piano affords pleasure to his lordship, the master, as he hears his daughter gracefully touching the keys, a company of guests being present who, by-the-by, came to the mansion in carriages made by wagonmakers and were attired in dresses cut and sewed by tailors, adorned with diamonds, the polished work of lapidaries, and with rings and chains the result of the goldsmith's toil. The piano was manufactured by various kinds of artisans. When his lordship sits down he makes use of an ivory which some mechanic has been at night full weeks in constructing. He passes the night on wire springs, each one of which represents so many blows of Labor's hammer, he washes himself in the morning with water to heat which the cook downstairs had to light a fire, while the bath and taps are the handiwork of plumbers. He cannot turn his body but Labor administers to his comfort and delight. Examine into everything that pleases him and you will find Labor's strong arm both the foundation and the superstructure. But the divinities of the rich man as the lot of his poorer fellowman. It is by his own labor that the ordinary man nourishes his life. His own toil and privation erects a house for the woman upon whom he has looked with favoring eye. The man in the ditch throws up the blue clay and it is the repeated contraction an relaxation of his muscles that supplies bread for his ravenous children. The rich man may, and often does, despise manual labor, the sensible man never will, the poor man must not, for his labor is his existence. Labor is ordained of God and no man is happy who does not labor. Therefore let the goddess be worshipped.

STABBED ON THE STREET.

NASHVILLE, July 21.—Thomas Dooling, one of the city recorders, was stabbed and killed by J. Blakemore on the street last night, in a difficulty about a woman. Blakemore escaped.

TO J. M. M.

(Written for The World.)

I shall return to thee, but fear thou not my spirit dwells in the air above thee. I shall return, all earthly grief forgot, and love thee more a thousand times than now. In that pure love shall be no vain repining. But the deep fervor of a ceaseless prayer, and still at morning's dawn and eve's declining 'My soul with thine each waking thought shall share.

When thou art vexed and wearied from the strife of worldly cares, perchance of friends unkilnd, And from the shadows of thy former life A name, my name, comes back upon thy mind. Then think not thou hast lost me, nearer now My spirit dwells, than when in mortal form I lived with thee, for I am ever near. And had these hopes until the good time came. One with all nature, we shall meet at last. With the eternal celestial dwell: Lured by no future, tortured by no past "After life's fulfilment sleeping well."

—CHARLES FREDERICK MURRAY.

HOW TO CELEBRATE DOMINION DAY.

The demonstration of the trades unions in this city on Saturday is a lesson to all Canadians how to celebrate our national day, the first of July. As things now are the affections of our people are centered in various days in connection with the history of other countries. The Irishmen have their St. Patrick's day, the orangemen the twelfth of July, the Scotch St. Andrew's day and the English St. George's. On all these occasions the people who treasure the traditions in connection with them turn out and show their affection in that direction. It is true that we do in a measure observe Dominion Day as a great occasion, but not as much as we should. The reason of this is that the loyalty of our people to it is drawn off in other channels. What we should do is to take a lesson from the trades' demonstration. The next first of July let all the trades, professions and the youth of the country take part in a great demonstration in honor of Canada and Canadian ideas. Let men meet there annually as Canadians and let them forget those traditions which have been the cause of dissension in former days, in other lands.

THE GLOBE AND ITS FAULTS.

To the Editor of The World.

Sir: The amount of criticism which has been called forth by the action of the Globe in the recent elections is only exceeded by the lack of the principles of justice and fair dealing which have characterized that criticism. Not a few who were disposed to differ with the Globe on the political situation, and who have given public expression to their opinions through the columns of The World, seem to have transmitted their adverse opinions into another and scarcely fair channel when they undertake to assess the Globe's status as a newspaper. The offense taken by one newspaper is apparently blinded certain individuals to everything, and caused them to strike indiscriminately at everything within their reach without regard to the injustice of the assault or the character of the person assaulted. "A Canadian Nationalist" has developed a prominent phase of this character when he indulges in the atrocious denunciation of a national policy it has had a great deal to do with the defeat of the liberal party, but I fail to see why on that account it should be denounced as a newspaper. I don't think any intelligent individual unless he be completely and hopelessly blinded with partisanship will deny that the Globe as a newspaper is successful. It is certainly the most vigorous and enterprising journal I know of in Canada and will not suffer by comparison with any American or English paper. Its editorial and contributing staff is most complete, and Gordon Brown, although deficient in many respects is recognized by those who know to be one of the ablest editors on the continent. His great fault, like that of his late gifted and lamented brother, lies in not sufficiently respecting the sentiment of Justice which adorns the heading of the paper. He is too imperious, but after all this has been the fault of many a great and noble man who had they been otherwise the present generation would not enjoy many privileges which as it is falls to their lot. True these principles are out of keeping with the progressive spirit of the age, but I repeat it does not follow that because the Globe is conducted without sufficient regard to the political opinions of the people, advantage should be taken of this state of affairs to throw broadcast the venom of spite against an otherwise able, enterprising and intelligent journal. The chapter entitled "The Ups and Downs" is far better unwritten. It can serve no good purpose and avers with double the strength of the very faults which it so forcibly assails. To the present day the Globe occupies the highest place among Canadian newspapers, and I believe The World as the advocate of a true nationality in the newspaper, and it was a considerable degree of pleasure that I read the editorial which in saying a good word for the Globe proclaimed itself truly liberal. Yours truly,
