mission to produce the play was well austained by the people, but still there was an impression through it all that Mr. Morse should be given a chance. Mow that the hero is proved a mere trickster public opinion will consign him to the oblivion from which he recently emerged. The real facts seem to be as follows: Mr. Eaves, costumer, became infatuated with the idea of the Passion Play when making the costume for its projected production at Booth's some years ago. Under the tutelage of the wily Morse Mr. Eaves became firmly convinced that a great work of moral regeneration might be accomplished. Therefore he gave Mr. Morse $5000 for a part of his copyright and went to work. Mr. Eaves hoped that the Passion Play would do good, but he also hoped to make money at the same time. He and Morse took in as partners Messrs. Severance, Ferris and George D. Roberts. The last named gentleman put $30,000 in the firm, and the work was pushed forward. So far fully $60,000 have been sunk, and it is said that Morse has not lost a penny of it, though he has posed as the victim of the law's injustice all through. Oxford Vanquishes Cambridge for the Twenty-second fime. Loxpox, March 15-Oxford and Cambridge came the usual one from Putney to Mortiake, the die tar ce being four miles two furlongs. The weather was gloomy and cold, but the water was smooth and the tide sluggish. The usual crowds lined the one on Oxford went begging, but within the past week a great change came over the scene, the was on Tuesday and they remained in high popular as three to one was offered on them. This was on Tuesday and they remained in high popular favor until the very start, when the quotation was 7 to 2 on them, or half a point better. The result was a thunderclap and the knowing ones are wondering how so great a mistake could have been made. Usually public opinion turns out about right, but on this occasion it was away off, it being a thing unpricedented for a crew that were such warm favorites as the Cantabs were to be beaten. Uxford's victory was, however, immensely popular, the cheering as the crew pulled steadily in probably bring all the heartier because the betting fraternity had turned against them.

It wasted ninetees minutes to 0 before a start was effected. The clouds were then lowering and it looked as if the black masses of human beings that stretched far away on both sides of the river were in for a good drenching, and the sequal shows that appearances were not deceptive. Cambridge had the Middlesex side. The dark blues had the best of an uneven start. They pulled a regular stroke of nearly forty to the minute and were almost clear of the Cambridge boat at Craven steps, about six furlongs from the stat. The Cambridge boat liere deflected towards the Middlesex shoe. At the end of the first mile, which they covered in 4 15, the Oxonians were two lengths a shead and rowing well together. Here the darkness thickened and sleet began to fall. The Cambridge crew were splashing considerably by the time the soasworks were reached. At Hammersmith bridge, 12 miles from Putney, they were nine seconds behind the Oxfords. At Chiswick Eyest, three-quarters of a mile further on, they were four lengths astern, but were going b tter. A violent hail and rain storm came on when they were at this point. The Cambridge eight quickened their speed, but when in Corney Reach it was evident it was all over with them Oxford pulled in the easiest of winners through a slightly fal log rain. The enormous surolus which the ETNA LIFE has accumulated enables it to fur nish insurance at lower rates than it is possible for the majority of companies to do. Estimated by the most rigid standard, the surplus now exceeds four and a half millions. This large surilus fund, it will be seen, not only insures absolute protection to policy-holders, but it is a continued source of profit to them. The officers of the ÆTNA are to be commended for their successful management as evidenced by each recurring year.—

The Age
THE ÆFNA commences the new year with brilliant prospects. Its investments are of a most satisfactory character. Its stocks and bonds rank high in value, and exceed their cost a larger percentage than in any previous year. Its forces are well organized, and the company will continue increasing its basiness and usefulness. The friends, patrons, and management of the ÆFNA LIFE may well feel proud of it.—Hartford Evening Post.

"THE ATNA"

Is the name of a very handsome quarterly journal published by the Company and mailed to each Policy-holder throughout the world. The number for April, 1883, contains the Company's 33rd Annual Report in full, and also a complete list of all Death Claims of $1000 or over paid during 1882.
