We do not hold ourselves responsible for Prohibition Scriptural.

Prohibition Scriptural.

To the Editor of the Monitor:—

DEAR SIR,—The point of discussion between your correspondent "Jus" and myself, is as to the Scripturalness of Prohibition. He is edging away from this phase of the subject as fast as he can, but I insist upon the settlement of this point before we pass to the consideration of any other.

In my last article I gave "Jus" his choice of two horns of a dilemma; one being a denial that the principle was found involved in the restrictive laws that God gave to Israel—that all were prohibited from any course that would interfere with the rights of others, the other being that the liquor trafic does not interfere with the rights of others. The first horn was avoided. I am willing to believe that he has reverence for the Bible, and is unwilling to deny that that principle is involved in the laws to which I have alluded. He has chosen the other horn. He saw of course that it was necessary for him to do so, or to step down and out. This he seems unwilling yet to do.

Now what does his present position in volve? Simply to champion the liquor trafic. He quotes my statement that the liquor traffic is "a hoary monster and stands arraigned at the bar of public conscierce, charged with a countless number of murders, rapes, suicides and riots."

The liquor traffic is here represented as a prisoner who has been arraigned in court under the above charge.

the victims of this monster all over our land. Facts and figures are being constantly placed before us by those who have the good of humanity at heart concerning the deadly work being carried on day and night by this monster. No doubt more capital will be put into this traffic, and it will reckon upon a new lease of life, since it has won to itself such able counsel. Calder & Sons mill.

At a recent meeting it was agreed that a committee be authorized to purchase grounds with old huildings at Clark's Corner and a committee be authorized to purchase grounds with old huildings at Clark's Corner and a committee be authorized to purchase grounds in the street and constitutions at Clark's Corner and a committee be authorized to purchase grounds in the street and constitutions at Clark's Corner and a committee be authorized to purchase grounds in the street and constitutions at Clark's Corner and a committee be authorized to purchase grounds in the street and constitutions at Clark's Corner and a committee be authorized to purchase grounds in the street and constitutions are constituted by the frosts of thousands of years, are matted with blood and filth; his bleared eyes have in their depths only the light of craft, lust and murder; his bloated face suggests only coarse brutality, base indulgences and fiendish cornelities; his defiled raiment shows that he has been wallowing in the street and constitutions are constituted by the frosts of thousands of years, are matted with blood and filth; his bleared eyes have in their depths only the light of craft, lust and murder; his bloated face suggests only coarse brutality, base indulgences and fiendish cornelities; his defiled raiment shows that he has been wallowing in the street and constitutions.

He insists in keeping bravely on in his old path, declaring that the Bible condemns drunkeness only, and has much to say about specific and general statements which sound very learned, but unfortunately have no bearing whatever on the subject under consideration.

drunkeness only, and has much to say about specific and general statements which sound very learned, but unfortunately have no bearing whatever on the subject under consideration.

Slavery and the opium traffic are condemned by the same principle that condemns the liquor traffic, notwithstanding the wilderness of words with which "Jus" seeks to rule them out.

Now coming to the use of the Gospel of Christ with which "Jus" seeks to substantiate his position, I have this to say. "Christ came not to destroy the law or the prophets, but to fulfill."—Matt. v: 17. That quotation sweeps away all that he says under this head. The principles involved in the laws of the O. T. still obtain. In the imagination of "Jus" the prohibitory liquor law of Maine has passed away. Exactly! I should not be surprised if he informs us in his next article that there never had been any such law in Maine. It is certainly one redeeming feature in him, that he has made provision for some doubt, which he has forseen might arise in some minds as they read his remarkable statement. That Maine Liqur Law seems to trouble him.
