

Business of the House

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): I believe that will be agreeable, Mr. Speaker. We did this once before a year or so ago and ran over just a few minutes past ten o'clock. The financial critic on this side will speak very quickly and shortly.

Mr. Knowles: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Do I hear unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): It is so ordered.

Mr. Churchill: May I ask the house leader to give us in a short sentence, so that he who runs may read, the business for tomorrow?

Mr. Pickersgill: As a matter of fact, sir, I think hon. gentlemen will find they can read better if they sit down.

It is the intention of the government to go on with the debate on the department of industry resolution as the first item of business tomorrow, and as soon as that has been concluded, to begin the resolution respecting the Department of Agriculture. In the event that both those items should be completed before five o'clock, I would begin the Atlantic development board resolution. If there should be any time between the conclusion of the rapid remarks of the financial critic opposite and ten o'clock, we would go on until ten o'clock with whatever business had been interrupted at five o'clock. As far as Friday is concerned, I think perhaps I would rather wait until tomorrow night to indicate the business for Friday, because it will depend to some extent upon what progress we make tomorrow.

It being three minutes after six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.
