IMPENDING REVOLUTION.

The Break up of the Menarchy in Italy.

Criept as Dictator

In the time of the Roman Emperors the most noted physicians of the day rve an imperial inspects's life for more than thirty years, the dectors now gathered around the deathbed of the Italian monarchy and govern ment seem to be content with pro-lenging its exitence for a week or a at a time. Italy is on the eve of dissolution, utter dissolution; the long series of crises, financial, political and personal, have weakened her to frem whatever reputable or disreputable quarter it may come, must topple her wer. Here are some of the signs of the times":

The King has become so desperate to place his grivate fortune with foreign bankers, preparatory to flight.

Crispi is scheming to secure the Presidency, if not the dictatorship of the republic for which he is working, having given up all hopes of saving

Admiral Brin, until recently Queen Marguerito's faithful friend, has joined the army of rats that is leaving the airking ship of state.

The Italian Parliament, once voted the most able and patriotic of the Continues, according to the latest developments is composed largely of bribetakers and olackmalers, while Italy's credit is on a par with that of Greece and Portugal.

Greece and Portugal.
And in this bewildering state of cowardice, scheming, unfaithfulness, crime and calamity, only one "reassuring factors "The German Emperor," the official papers announce today, "will visit Italy in the Spring."
Will he," say the Liberals. "Dare he come?" growl the Radicals, Socialists and Anarchists.

A REPUBLIC NEXT. A few days before the latest attempt on his life I heard Signor Crispi say reassuring to Madamo Lena, but the days for individual affrontery, or macrifice for that matter, seem passed. Maybe the Savoy dynasty will continue are another month between sobs of the Taybe the Savoy dynasty will continue gies and joyful sentiments of her another month between sobs of the youth wher the Alps separate her trying and the hearse cry of the from the vicissitudes of kingship.

Extremists, but its speedy doom is as inovitable us was that of Louis the Saint's successors after centuries of systema-tized self aggrandizement and financial embarrassments.

" And when the cloak has fallen and after it the sovereign"—in this case Cris pi and Unberto what then? A repub-lic, of the Pope's blessing, or anarchy? The spirit is for the first, but the flesh is weak and in Italy ever ready to group itself round the meat pots of "one's betters" Archibald Forbes recently expressed the conviction that in case of a popular uprising in Rome the Vatican was sure to be sacked first. Maybe he is right. The Pope's residence promises a far bigger haul than the Quirinal, but a nation can not live on freebooting forever will be a reign of terror, a short season of reckoning, perhaps a skirmish with Germany if she should endeaver to interfere in favor of the monarchy. or with Austria for the possession of Trieste, but the logical termination will be a republic and an alliance with France. And then the Church, al ways a sure winner, because it knows chough to abide the proper time, will loom up triumphantly in a way, first, perhaps, in a small way, placing one gloved hand on the popular pulse, but with the moral support of France, its grip will tighten until the Latin Union becomes a Roman confederation with the Holy See as arbiter.

PADICAL CHANGES DEMANDED.

One need not be a reactionary to agree with the only respectable and uncompromised party in Italy, the New Conservatives, who flaunt the Republican banner over a platform demanding abdication of the House of Savoy, abolition of the anti-Christian system of education, distribution of taxes upon rich and poor alike, greater freedom of municipal life, simplifica-tion of bureaucratic methods and a cessation of hostilities against the Church.

The present Government itself recognizes the urgent necessity of a change of front in some respects. It has come to the conclusion, for instance, that an army pivoting on the monarchical idea alone, without Chris tian belief to counterbalance its dog mas, is a dangerous plaything that at cistic schools propagat, anarchy, and that without centralization it will be impossible to continue the Govern ment machine running for any length of time. But all these good intentions go to waste in the face of Parliamentary opposition.

THE KING'S PREPARATIONS FOR FLIGHT. Nobody will deny Umberto personal courage and rare fighting qualities, inherited and acquired. His Mejesty has deposited the $30,000,000 of avail able property he owns with the Lon-don Rothschild's, and this seems to indicate that in his estimation the wery last resources of resistance are exhausted. That he has taken this precaution cannot be demed. The transfer was effected some months ago, and ever since the attitude of the populace towards their Majesties has become more sullen and outspokenly Umberto looks haggard and wretched, and the Queen is but a shadow of herself. Poor, luxury loving Marguerite, she will regain the ener

Was there ever a queen so fond of brilliant society, so particular as to old-time notions of roval prerogative, who had to content herself with a court such as is forced upon Mar-Irresponsible writers like to dwell upon "the democratic aspect of the Qurmal." It is indeed democratic, but not from choice of its guiding spirits. When the notifity of the spirits. When the nomity of the realm hold aloof, more civilians must be welcomed to their accustomed places. Napoleon I created dukes and marquises and counts and barons to surround immself with company belitting his rank I inberto dare not follow this august example, even assuming the willingness of intended vetens, for an Italian degree of nobility is equal to a public insult, so he is constrained to treat as relatives a whole horde of commoners, sporting the Order of St. Amunzeiti (which confers upon the incumbent the tale of "His Majesty's cousin, while Mme, Lona, otherwise Mme, Crispi, Mme, Minghetti and Mme, Caroll, wivesand widows of plebeian Munsters, respectively, constitute the Queen's guard of honor on official occasions.

A HATTY PARE.
A fine "maid of honor" this Mme. A me "maje of nonor" this Mme. Lena! She stems to have taken it apon herself to bleed the Banca Romana independently of the other members of her family charged with the crime that will figure in history as the prime reason for Italy a dissolution. Her frantic declarations that ex Prenner Globi's letters bearing her signature and evidences of her handwriting are forgeries strike one almost as funny. If a man goes about falsifying documents, there is a certain inimit to his working power. Who could invent 120 different private epistics and write them in Mme. Crispis hand. And what about her debts at milliners, drapers, watering place, etc... They were paid by the riangers of the Banca Romana, where the lady does not seem to have had an account.

The king finds it actually impossible to fill the post of Minister of the Royal Rouse in the manner intended, that is, by the nomination of some Roman randee. The office has gone a begsince the dismissal of Raticzi. Lach candidate professes to be delighted with the prospects, but after a little while sends in his regrets. At the present time Prince Doua-Lamphily has the matter under consideration. but it is ten to one that he declines the honor. All these people believe in the imminent downfall of the Savoys, and the restoration of the Holy Sec. They refuse to unplicate themselves.

CRISTI AND THE ISSUE.

Why Crispi's sudden submission to the dictates of the Church Vatican pre-s organs and some of the Vatican pre-s organs and some of the Cardinals are protesting vigorously against this compromise, but Leo cer tainly knows his own business best. If the monarchy falls and Crispi as sumes the dictatorship he wou'd have to back to the Pope for support, for he stands is clated nowadays. The Vati stands is clated nowadays can a power, on the other hand can a power, on the other ham a now greater a Italy than it has been for the last twenty five years. The Pope could easily do or undo Crispi as a dictator.

When he seems to favor him, one must necessarily assume that Crispi has made decisive proteins and it may lead, in a measure, to a restoration of Papal temporary power during 1 of slifetime. There is not an abler hylolifetime. There is not an abler liplo mat in Lurope than the Pope, and not a more cunning, more desperate politican than Crispi.

As if all these meidents and occur rences were not enough to furnish for I for reflection and darken the political horizon, our moble brigands make of late apecial efforts to give us a taste of "the state of the fature, anticipated by many and dreaded by the majority of law abiding people. Sardinia keeps up her reputation for superior brigantoggo against all new-comers, uniformed or ununiformed. One of the local prefects wrote the other day to the Minister of the Interior
