

from one employment to another, without doing any things of consequence in any. Let me earnestly beg of you to improve with the seed-time of life, that the product may be an easy and abundant harvest, not of new accomplishments, but of useful information and of solid virtuous habits. Then may you hope to pass through life and discharge its duties with the respects of others, and the approbation of your own conscience. Above all, forget not the paramount claims of religion: unaffected piety is especially graceful in youth; should you be spared to reach old age, it will smooth the decline of life and it will prepare you for the endless joys of eternity
