and Dr. E. H. Dougias, both of Little Falis, but not related, declared under oath that Grace Brown was not drowned. It was their opinion that she died from blows, which killed her or rendered her unconscious before her body was dropped into Big Moose Lake. They declared that there was not enough water in the lungs of the body to warrant a theory of drowning.

The substance of their testimony, which occupied the entire day, was pathizers. that Grace Brown received one blow that cut her upper lip and loosened a tooth, that another blow discolored her cheek and ruptured a blood vessel, and that a third and more severe blow on the scalp caused a blood clot on the brain. The blood clot on the brain, the physicians swore, was sufficient of itself to have caused death.
