The recent American Federation of Labor convention at Montreal was re. British colonies have developed with labor of any inclination toward, or sympathy with, socialism. The convention was praised from day to day put it: for its conservatism and good sense. The recognition of the Irish republic by a convention sitting in a British commonwealth was resented in this country, but attracted little attention in the United States. The big interests and the newspapers which voiced their views day after day patted the A. F. of L. on the head.

the convention, by an overwhelming majority, declared in favor of government ownership and operation of the railways of the United States. Shrieks of "Socialist!", "Anarchist!" and "Red!" rent the air. The moral effect of this declaration by labor could not be overlooked. It reflected a tendency among the American people which has not been reported by the press.

The Republican and Democratic parties in the United States are alike in their unprogressive platforms and cautious candidates. They seem, by common consent, to have relegated everything progressive to the radicals, who are assembling today in Chicago

This would bring him within a few blocks of Governor Cox's office in the state house at Columbus. and within reasonable distance of Senator Harding's home at Marion. Thus the three presidential candidates for public opinion to deal with. In his speech at Washington the other day Ambassador Geddes said:

other day Ambassador Geddes said: In the days of America's birth pangs there were many on both sides of the Atlantic, more perhaps in actual numbers on the other side than on this, who thought the action of the framers of your con-stitution right. But we must re-member that there were also many on both sides of the Atlantic who thought their action wrong.

But there was no press cable service at that time to publish what was really being said and done on both sides of the ocean. The colonists took up arms, elieving there was no other redress, and the home government sent an army to fight them because it was taken for granted that there could be no further discussion. Since then the

The declaration of independence of the American colonies, which we celebrate today, was but a mile-stone in the development of the Anglo-Saxon race. It merely gives expression to the spirit of liberty that dominated the minds of the people and moved them to action on both sides of the Atlantic.

Some think that the participation of the British Empire and the American republic as allies in the great war will do more to perpetuate Anglo-American peace than all the universities and scholarships in the world. This seems to have been the sentiment that characterized the presentation on the fourth of July to General Pershing by Ambassador Geddes of a jeweled sword as a gift to the general from the lord mayor and corporation of the city of London. Both the ambassador and the general made felicitous speeches.
