GERMANY FORCED TO DRAW ON SECRET WAR CHEST OF GOLD

Heard of $30,000,000 at Fortress of Spandau—Circulation Betrayed by Bank Bags

London, March 20.—The Times says that Germany, despite the cheerful assertions of her financial experts as to the adequacy of her gold reserve, has apparently been compelled to open the Spandau vaults and draw on the hoard kept for any warlike emergency—in the strong fortress of Spandau, near Berlin.

Originally contained $200,000,000, which was reserved from the indemnity paid by France in 1872 after the Franco-Prussian war, when that sum was placed in the Julius Tower at Spandau it comprised a considerable portion of gold in English sovereigns. A considerable number of these coins have now found their way back to one of the big joint stock banks in London, showing that the hoard kept for 48 years which has lain untouched has now been drawn upon. The bankers, who received the gold by way of Scandinavian—a fact which might suggest that it was used to pay for imports other than armaments—were at once struck by the fact that they had received a number of new un worn sovereigns bearing the date of 1872, but the presumption that the money came from the Treasury House of Spandau was strengthened by the surprising fact that the original Bank of England labels of 1872 were found on some of the bags containing the coins.

Apprehension of a consignment of English gold had lain unopened at Spandau since that year. Bankers yesterday expressed some surprise that no effort had been made to conceal the place of origin of the gold by removal of the old Bank of England labels, as knowledge that the war chest is being drawn upon might readily, when it became public, be construed as symptomatic of Germany's position in regard to gold supplies.

At the opening of the Reichstag last week, Dr. Helfferich, secretary of state for the Imperial treasury, asserted that Germany, in respect of her stock of gold, is better off than Great Britain, France or Russia. A few days earlier German wireless news stated that the gold reserve of the Reichsbank on February 27 was $367,000,000.
