

POLICE MADE RAID INTO UNDERWORLD

Dragnet Moved Along Strictly Military Lines in Berlin, and None Escaped.

(Special Cable to the New York Times and Montreal Gazette.)
Berlin, Oct. 4.—A police offensive against criminal night life and the underworld took place in the early morning hours today along strictly military lines, following revelations of conditions in the heart of Berlin which have become a public scandal. At least 180 detectives of the so-called "morality police" and five companies of heavily armed security police with fleets of motor trucks formed the attacking force against Berlin's criminal elements.
At 12.30 a.m. the morality police of Berlin gathered in a conference room of police headquarters and received the last minute secret orders. At 1 o'clock the heavily armed security police started a concentric march in two waves for the scene of moral warfare, followed by motor trucks for transporting the prisoners.
Shortly before 1.30 o'clock the highest leaders, consisting of three criminal commissioners, sped in fast motors to the corner of Unter den Linden and Friedrichstrasse, the so-called "Kranter Corner," well known to American tourists.
At 1.50 o'clock the shrill whistle of the chief criminal commissioner posted on the corner gave the signal for the commencement of the operations. Immediately the security police closed off the heart of Berlin, including the Unter den Linden from Adlon to Charlottenstrasse. Nobody caught in these streets was allowed to slip out, unless able to prove identity and respectability. Night hawks without passports or other identification papers were out of luck.
As the first and second wave of police lines with drawn revolvers closed in tighter the night hawks were herded to the intersection of Friedrichstrasse and Unter den Linden, where the morality police got busy and examined each doubtful individual.
The raid caught 1,000 persons in the dragnet, whereof 600 could prove identity. Five hundred men and women were loaded in motor trucks and taken to police headquarters, where they were subjected to closer scrutiny.
The police force continued operations against another section of Berlin, where divers frequented by criminal elements abound. Here another 500 were bagged and taken to police headquarters.
Among the thousand held for minute examination the police caught more than 300 criminals.

MATTER OF PAY EARNED BY GIRLS

Minimum Wages Board of Ontario to Hear Petests Tonight.

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 4.—When the minimum wage board of Ontario sits here tonight it will have varied protests submitted to it, some of which will be critical of its recent decisions in fixing minimum wages at a figure felt to be too high, while other protests will be made that there are many other fields in which female workers are employed where they are not receiving a living wage.

Controller O'Flair will instance one specific case, he said, where girls are employed in a local factory on a piece work basis, with the result that not a few of them make as low as fifty cents a day, while few receive more than $2 a week.

It is not unlikely that Geo. G. Hecrow, M. P. P., will make overtures to the board to exercise its influence with the government to have the board's scope widened so that it can investigate the wages paid male workers.
