

The HONOR of the BIG SNOWS

By James Oliver Curwood Author of THE DANGER TRAIL

(Synopsis of Previous Chapters)

"Snows," he whispered. "Come! My father's cabin home in the far Canadian north, she hears music. Presently the door opens and Jan Thorvald, with his violin, enters. After the death of Melrose, Jan, who sought her last moments, is invited to stay on in the cabin with Cummins, who is a hunter.

CHAPTER II—(Continued) And there was no one who noticed Jan the next day—except Melrose. He had returned, he felt more and more the pall of gloom that had settled over his spirit in the heart of the wilderness. He had seen the woman, in life and in death, and he loved her and grieved that she was no more. He said nothing; he asked nothing; but he saw the spirit of devotion in the man, these few days of mourning. He saw it in the terror-stricken eyes of the wild little children who had grown to worship Cummins' wife. He read it in the blanking stillness of the dogs, in the terrible, pulseless quiet that had settled about him.

CHAPTER III Little Melrose. The passing of Cummins' wife was as quiet as had been her coming. With her hands, their always hand falling wide about their faces, their lips set tight to choke back their grief, the few at the post went, one by one, to their little cabin and gazed for the last time upon her face. There was but one sound other than the gentle tread of their moccasins, and that was a catching, sobbing moan that fell from the thick grey beard of Williams, the old factor.

CHAPTER IV The New Dean of Westminster. Westminster Abbey's new dean, the Right Reverend Bishop Byssie, is creating a great deal of discontent and criticism by publicly announcing his determination to enforce still more strictly the observance of the rule, quietly established by the late dean, of permitting no eulogiums to be read in the abbey unless the subject of the eulogy be a member of the church.

La MARQUISE de FONTENAY

One Reason for Kitchener's Success in Egypt—A Memorial to the Barons—Cremation at Westminster Abbey

That Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, his proved himself to be a great success in the role of British plenipotentiary in Egypt and that he has restored to the prestige and authority with which he was invested in the time of Lord Cromwell, but which it lost when held by the late Sir Eldon Gorst, is a fact known to all who are conversant with the history of the Egyptian empire. This knowledge dates back to the time before he was even commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army but when, as the head of the intelligence department, he was preparing, with the aid of his staff, the same time thoroughness, for the reconquest of the Sudan from the Derwishes.

These days he used to roam about the border lines in the disguise of an Arab sheikh, wholly unrecognizable to the Derwish outposts and camps and displaying such a thorough knowledge of the customs and ways of the people, so that he could pass as a native of the country, and he was so completely a master of Arabic that he could be taken for an Arab at any time.

It is a good deal of time that he has been in England at the society which has been formed on this subject, and he has been in the habit of visiting the officers of the society, who bear the title of "Signet." It is now in England for the purpose of the memorial, and it takes the name of the "Signet" because of the fact that the signet ring of the society is the signet ring of the Marquis de Fontenay.

Westminster Abbey's new dean, the Right Reverend Bishop Byssie, is creating a great deal of discontent and criticism by publicly announcing his determination to enforce still more strictly the observance of the rule, quietly established by the late dean, of permitting no eulogiums to be read in the abbey unless the subject of the eulogy be a member of the church.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"He is probably a nervous and high strung child," I suggested, referring to a youngster who had just had a tantrum and been sent out of the room. I had hoped by this tactful explanation to soothe his father's displeasure, but strangely enough, my remark seemed to produce just the opposite effect. Across the father's face passed a thunder cloud of disapproval. He is NOT, he affirmed vigorously, and what is more, he's going to be held that he is. I am glad he didn't hear you say that. My wife said it once in his presence, but only once. I let her have her way about a good many things, but that's a matter in which I'm firm as Gibraltar.

What one of us doesn't know families like the one which I have described—families in which "nerves" with a capital N, are made a fetish, the children have their mother talk with pride how nervous and high strung they are, and they actually think of nerves as something to be proud of, and they are actually ashamed of a child who has had teeth, indigestion, or any other indication that we have transcended the great law of health.

PRINCE WINS $100,000 AT MONTE CARLO. Prince Jaime de Bourbon, the Spanish pretender, is reported to have cleaned up $100,000 at Monte Carlo. The Prince went to the Casino on Christmas Day, according to the dispatches, and with $12,000 to start with, he experienced a constant run of good luck, winning by $50,000. The next day his luck stayed with him, and he won $20,000 more.

SOLDIERS OF POWERS ARE PROTECTING RAILWAY. Peking, Jan. 6.—The treaty powers have undertaken the protection of the railroad between Peking and the sea. Interruption of traffic along this line, which has prevented the passage of the mails for four days, has resulted in this decision. The soldiers of British, German, Japanese and French troops have been stationed at intervals between Peking and Chin Wang Tso, according to the plan devised two months ago. A Japanese general is in command, as he is the ranking officer.
