SOCIETY FAVORITE SOON TO OPEN HER VILLA

MRS. ELSIE FRENCH VANDERBILT IN FRONT OF THE NEWPORT CASINO.

Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, formerly the wife of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, is spending the summer at Newport, where, though she has herself thus far done no entertaining, she is often seen in the streets and at lawn parties. It is believed that Mrs. Vanderbilt will soon issue invitations to entertainments at her villa.

PAROLE IN WIFE'S CUSTODY HUSBAND'S PUNISHMENT

"Take Him Home and Tell Him what You Think of Him," Says Policeman E. Aloysius Kennedy, after Getting that Duty off His Own Chest.

(New York Herald.)
Contrary to the rule which governs such cases, a young woman who had caused the arrest of her husband and put the police to the trouble of taking him to the west side court yesterday announced that she had no intention of withdrawing her complaint.

Policeman E. Aloysius Kennedy looked at her and made no attempt to conceal his surprise.
"You don't mean to say," he asked, "that you're not sorry for the poor man? Think of the humiliation your husband must suffer when I arrested him in the saloon."

"If you hadn't arrested him there, you wouldn't have arrested him at all," the young woman said stiffly. "I think he keeps his trunk there."
"That you're not sorry for the poor man? Think of the humiliation your husband must suffer when I arrested him in the saloon," said Kennedy, "and when it's my duty to go into a saloon I go into the saloon, but I certainly hated to pinch your husband. All the way to the station house he kept telling me I made a mistake and that I must be looking for another fellow of the same name. He says he's got a double, too, that looks like him."

"If the double acts like him he ought to be in jail too," said the young woman, glaring at her unhappy husband. He was boring holes in the floor with his eyes.
"There he stood," said Kennedy, "leaning against the bar entirely surrounded by thirsty friends. Boys' was saying, 'you all know me well enough to know I'm no knocker, but what I can't understand is how that boss of ours gets away with it. He's no better than any of us.' And then some fellow that ordered a 20 cent drink when your husband bought the round, by the way, he always forgets our husband: 'He ain't half as good as you are. By rights you ought to have his job.' And then your husband would say, 'Right is right and wrong is wrong, and I never knocked a man in my life, but you mark what I say, our boss is going to get his, and get it good. Give us all another drink.'"

Never "Sets 'Em Up" For Her.
"He comes out strong on that last speech," said the wife, "but he never takes me into a store and says, 'Give me a shirtwaist for my wife, or I want that hat over there to take home.' When he gets these money speeches, he always forgets our telephone number. He doesn't even remember the name of our street 'til he gets so he hasn't money enough for a taxi and has to take a car."

"He was having such a nice time when I butted in," said Kennedy. "He was doing all the buying and all the talking, and his friends say he has anything to do except drink and listen to him. Once in a while one of his friends would sneak a dollar bill off a roll and slide the roll back into his pocket and put the dollar bill on the bar and say, 'This is my turn,' and then your husband would push the dollar bill back and say, 'Get it out of the grape,' and then your husband's friends would give various reasons why they didn't like to drink wine. After they all got through giving their reasons they got talking about the different brands, and then they all decided the brand your husband said was the best really was the best, and when they saw he was going to pay for it they got reasonable and said, 'Let's sit down on those leather seats and have the waiter serve it over there.' And they all said your husband's story of the way he walked the streets here for months before he could get a job where he could show what he was made of was

"they don't deserve to have good wives."

"That's the kind that always gets 'em," Kennedy assured her. "Now 'Say,' said the husband desperately, 'send me to jail, will you? I don't want to be talked to death.'"

"I'm full of remorse," Kennedy asked him. "You're broke and remorse is one of the few things you can get without money."

"They all are the next day," said Kennedy. "But I think this one means it. Let's turn him loose; what do you say?"

"I say 'no,'" answered the wife, firmly. "I want him punished."

"All right," said Kennedy; "we'll give him the limit. We'll parole him in your custody and you can take him home and tell him what you think of him."

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

Among the better class of opponents of woman suffrage, there is a growing tendency to drop the old argument that women have not intelligence enough to vote, and to base opposition mainly on the "division of labor." We are told that the progress of civilization is marked by a growing division of labor and specialization of industry; that it is in accordance with this to have men do the work of the police, the work of soldiers and sailors, and the work of the domestic work; and that to admit women to the ballot would be a return toward barbarism.

It is true that the progress of civilization has been marked by a growing division of labor between man and man and woman and woman, but not between men and women. Thus in the early days, every man cut down trees and built his own house, raised animals and killed them for meat; and himself cured their hides. Now this work is divided up between the carpenter, the butcher and the tanner. In the old days, every housewife spun and wove cloth, dyed it, and made it up into garments for her family, and also made butter and cheese, soap and candles. Now this work is divided up among a dozen women and men. The division of labor between individuals has been constantly increasing, but not the division of labor between the sexes.

The trend of things has been just the other way.

A hundred years ago, hardly any occupations were open to women except household work. Now, for the census of 1900 shows that out of the hundreds of trades and professions followed by men, the only ones in which women were engaged were the work of soldiers and sailors, and telegraph and telephone linemen. Nothing could be more untrue than to say that the progress of civilization is marked by a more and more rigid division of labor between the sexes.

Some people admit that the trend of the times has been to open more employment to women, but declare that it is a calamity for women to engage in wage-earning occupations outside their homes; and, by an odd confusion of ideas, they make this an argument against equal suffrage. But this is to mix up a political question with a purely economic one. Whether it is right for women to vote is one thing; whether it is wise for her to work for money outside her home is quite another. There is no evidence that more women are wage-earners outside their homes in the States where woman vote than in the States where they do not. Wyoming has had full woman suffrage since 1890; but, according to the census of 1900, Wyoming has the smallest proportion of unmarried women to its population of any State in the Union, and presumably the smallest proportion of women who are obliged to engage in wage-earning occupations outside their homes. On the other hand, Massachusetts, New York, where women do not vote, have an enormous number of unmarried women wage-earners.

The "specialization of industry" has no bearing on the question. Voting is not an industry. The progress of civilization has not been to restrict the suffrage more and more narrowly, but to extend it to one class after another. The most advanced nations today are not those where all political power is concentrated in the hands of a single class, but those in which it is most widely shared among the people.

The best government is found where the largest number of the people are interested in the government, not where they neglect to vote and leave public affairs to be managed by a small class of "professional politicians."

OWES HER HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have been a sufferer from indigestion and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house."

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up and make them strong and well. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has always helped her."

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."

—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R. P. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and is a safe and reliable remedy for the largest number of actual cases of female diseases.

Boon Companions Grow Cold.
"Well," confessed Kennedy, "after I locked him up I asked him the usual question, 'Have you any friends who can help you out?' Most people have a lot more friends before they get pinched than after, but sometimes there are friends that stick right through. I thought your husband would give me the names of some of his audience in the saloon and they'd bail him out. He gave me the names all right, but the friends sent their regrets. They said they sympathized with him from the bottom of their hearts, but they didn't think their wives would want them mixing up in police court proceedings."

"A lot they care about what their wives think," sneered the complainant.
