HAMPTON.

Hampton Village, Feb. 6—Your correspondent took a trip to the United States and Canada Coal and Iron Company's anthracite mine at Central Norton Monday last. In an interview with the manager, ex-Alderman Rounds, of Portland (Me.), which the company's head office is situated. where the company's head office is situated, he said there were seven men at work. An experienced miner was at the bottom of the shaft and a blacksmith bottom of the shaft and a blacksmith.

The C. M. B. A. attended in a body, bottom of the shaft and a blacksmith with a portable forge was working at the mouth. He had also a competent engineer. One man was screening the coal, while two others were washing it by means of a perforated box dipped in and out of the adjacent brook. Mr. Rounds intends to ship to Portland next week. The coal is being stored in Mr. Pickle's wagon, shop and will be hauled to Hampton, where it will be placed on board the train. Henry Piers, of Norton, has already hauled some of it to the station.

which that most humane provision is made, that aged married couples are not separated. The best part of his lifetime he has been actively identified with railroading. He has a vivid recollection of the St. John fire of '77. On bringing his train into Portland that night his day's work was ended, but he volunteered upon hearing of the St. John fire to bring a relief train that night as far as Bangor. Starting as a poor boy, by diligence and perseverance he has accumulated considerable property and the very fact that he has taken hold of this mine is a guarantee of success.
