Dignity Sustained.

There is a great deal of talk in reference to the little question of precedence that prevented His Worship from indulging in his favorite amusement of dancing last night. His Worship had the honor of the first set, and the Committee ordered that the High Sheriff should be the happy man. His Worship, no doubt, would have been happy to have danced with her even after she had danced with some body else, if he could have done so without compromising his dignity. It was not personal vanity but the dignity of his office as Chief Magistrate of St. John that compelled Mr. Reed to sacrifice himself last evening by staying at home. This dignity has always been troubled by Mr. Reed, and he constantly forced him to forego little pleasures, and to shun the company of entertaining people. The burden of keeping up the dignity of the office has been, in fact, the one thing that has deprived it of its charms for Mr. Reed. A less conscientious man would have given up the office to be hung. I'll indulge my tastes, treat my friends at the cellar, groggeries, and be one of the boys that go in for fun; and I'll not lose the opportunity of dancing with the Countess and all the pretty girls of the town, and partaking of refreshments selected by my own educated taste, just on account of the dignity of my office. But our Mayor is no such man. He has been entrusted with the dignity of St. John, and he will maintain it. We nominate him for another term.

Palmer's Protest.

The letter written by A. L. Palmer to the Premier, protesting against the removal of the session of Parliament, gives expression to the chief reasons that forced the Premier and his Cabinet to resign the prerogative of prorogation. A pledge had been given by the Premier, not of course, without the Governor General's consent, that no business should be done—that the meeting should be adjourned to the 18th of September. It is not desirable that a precedent for so flagrant a breach of faith should be established. Following it some future Government, one with the political morality of the manipulators of the Pacific Scandal, might be tempted to do as he pleased with the session of Parliament, and to charge the Government with the odium of the duty—might have the majority of the House of Commons in opposition to the Government, and to bring the Government down.

The Citizens' Ball.

A few minutes after six o'clock last evening the ball room was declared to be finished by the committee at work, and when viewed, it was found to be in every way suitable for the occasion. The entrance for the Vice-regal party was through Mr. Reed's office, which was fitted up as a dressing room for the occasion. The Vice-regal party, which was on the floor immediately above, the stairs were carpeted, and her dressing room was elegantly furnished with oak furniture, and through it there were handsome upholstered chairs and lounges, marble top tables, mirrors, and the walls were hung with flags. It was really a charming little room, and well adapted for the occasion. The Directors' room was also carpeted and supplied with handsome furniture. The adjoining room was set apart for gentlemen. No money was received for the entertainment. The room was supplied and that was all. The coats and hats were taken and checked by two men, and were at once produced when required. In the firm's required was obtained from the establishment of C. E. Barnham & Co., and the carpets all came from Messrs. Sheraton, Son & Skinner, and were laid by the employees of the same firm. The auditorium was fitted up for the ball-room. A floor two feet higher than the stage, and extending back about half the depth, had been laid. The floor was an excellent one for dancing, being sprung and highly polished by machines from H. M. S. Spartan. The decorations, though not elaborate, were very neat and appropriate. Immediately facing the door and at the rear of the stage was a table, on which were placed chairs for their Excellencies. This table was adorned with two pieces of statuary, and exotic plants from the conservatory of J. Burpee. M. F. Flags were hung from the stage in different directions, and the Union Jack and Canadian flags hanging from the balcony boxes formed an arch over the throne provided for their Excellencies. The balcony and upper gallery were draped with red, white and blue cloth. On the upper gallery were also placed flowers of different colors. Over the stage was the word "Welcome" in green lights. The entire effect of the ball-room was fine, and, with the limited time at the committee's disposal, it is a matter of surprise how so much could be done. The canopies, whose cages were hung in different parts of the room, must not be forgotten, as they added by their singing to the general pleasing effect.

The Bigin-Brown Race "fall off."

Mr. Pryor this morning received the following despatch: "Have seen Bigin this p. m. I cannot now go on with match; will write further." Hoyle Hotel, Springfield. This was naturally a most astonishing announcement. The course had been laid out, distances measured, etc. Messrs. Pryor and Roberts having been up the Basin only yesterday afternoon for that purpose. There can be at present Bigin's only objection to the course, which is that it is not in a "cold" way so" mood that there seemed something indefinite all through the piece regarding this race. The Governor General.

The Drive to Quispamsis. The Vice-regal party had a resounding day forenoon, only broken by a few city gentlemen upon them. About half past two the party drove out to the residence of Chief Justice Ritchie at Quispamsis. On the road demonstrations were made almost everywhere. At Bonaventure, near the residence of James Donville, Esq., M. P., an evergreen arch had been erected. Here the carriage stopped and the young son of Mr. Donville presented the Countess with a large bouquet, and Mr. E. B. Bessie, an understanding Fletcher, who had been invited to the carriage, bowed and announced to the people, and conveyed with them. A very pleasant lunch was enjoyed by the party at the Chief Justice's residence. There were several demonstrations, as when they went out. Bonaventure were lighted in various places along the road, and the party arrived home about 8:30.

The Department for Fredericton.

This morning about nine o'clock His Excellency and party left the Victoria hotel for Fredericton. A guard of honor, consisting of about forty men under the command of Captain Hazen, were drawn up in front of the hotel. When he entered the carriage he was greeted with cheers. He drove to Lindavon and the various batteries of artillery fired salutes as he passed through the town. He went on board the David Weston, the crowd lustily cheering as the steamer moved off. The party was accompanied by the various members of the local government in Fredericton. They will receive a good Governmental and civic reception. To-night there will be a torchlight procession, numbering three hundred, the steam fire engine being beautifully decorated. Next week there will be an excursion and picnic on the Riviere du Loup Railway, and other festivities.

Government get it? Some say Harry Tack, our Deputy Minister of Justice, has the inside track at Ottawa, and that Peter Mitchell will never consent to the appointment of any other man. Others say that George E. King has influence enough to secure the position. Mr. Duff is spoken of as a man whose appointment would be popular with the profession. Mr. Palmer could, of course, have the office if he would take it, but it is positively asserted by those who profess to know, that he will not accept the appointment.

Mr. W. K. Crawford has received the September number of the "Ladies' Magazine," which is one of the best Gazettes of Fashion now before the public. It gives all the latest novelties in Parisian fashions, three monster supplements of Fashion for the month, including latest Broadway styles of dressing the hair, ladies' walking, travelling, carriage and evening costumes, children's suits, etc. Full descriptions of all the dresses are given and so simply that any person can understand them. We would especially call the ladies' attention to the handsome coloured application on the first page. Besides the other attractions this number contains several very interesting stories, all of which are concluded.

with their parents visiting Dr. Steeves of this city. The first quadrille was opened by Lord Dufferin, who danced with Miss Harding, daughter of the High Sheriff, and the Sheriff dancing with the Countess. This was the only dance in which the partners were prescribed. At the last set only from Lord Dufferin down selected his own partner. The Honorable and M. P.s were all in this set, and it must be acknowledged that some of them were anything but graceful dancers. His Excellency danced nearly every dance, while the Countess confined herself to quadrilles and the Lancers. He selected his partners with care, and danced with the fairest of the ladies present. The scene from the balcony while the dancing was going on was most animated and brilliant. The balcony was crowded with matrons who had come with their daughters. All were dressed in evening costumes, and the bright colors of the silks, the glitter of the jewels, and sparkling of bright eyes, will not soon be forgotten by those who had the pleasure of being present.

About 12 o'clock the Vice-regal party went to the supper room, which was under the charge of Mr. Edwards of the Victoria hotel. It was spread with everything that could be desired, both in liquids and solids. After the first party had departed the others hurried into the room as fast as they could get in, until all were satisfied.

were apparently reluctantly entered into by Bigin's friends, who after accepting the challenges seemed suddenly to have lost all desire to proceed. It will be well, if there should be any more boat-races projected, to have some security that no similar "crisis" will be perpetuated. A number of people in this city have been put to much trouble and expense in this matter, and now have only their labor for their pains.

There were no deposits made in the Bigin-Brown "Bingo" for this reason: Nearly three weeks ago Bigin was written to in regard to the matter, and he was asked to know whether the stakes were to be in greenbacks or otherwise. No answer whatever was received, until last night's despatch came, "Send on deposit." While Mr. Pryor was in the act of procuring a telegraphic bank draft this morning, for the purpose, so that there should be no delay, he received the despatch given above. It may be that Bigin is disabled some way; the letter of explanation spoken of will be looked for with interest.

An Odoriferous Station.

An Loo Station is not an attractive place. Travellers passing in the trains delight to gaze on our broad expanse of marsh lands and scent the odor of clover blossoms, but when they get within range of an Loo Station, they are suddenly closed with a snuff of disgust. The cattle pen is placed within a few feet of the station door.
